The Hoskins Report - Chapter 227

Arab-Turk Invasions

Roman Shops

When the Vandals invaded Rome they discovered warehouses loaded with spices, silks, and expensive goods from the Far East.

Romans had only a vague idea of where these costly goods had come from. It was a trade secret. All they knew was that they had come from somewhere on the other side of the the deserts beyond the borders of the Roman Empire. Those who did know didn't talk.

The thing that everyone understood was that a pound of pepper was worth a pound of gold. The spice trade delivered coveted goods, and bags and chests of gold and silver were returned in payment. Rome was drained of its gold and silver. Someone on the other side of the desert collected it. At the last, Rome had no gold and was forced to adopt the barter system. The spice merchants in the Far East owned the world's supply of gold. That gold allowed the spice merchants to buy anything that gold will buy - priests, kings, armies - anything!

Secret Spice Routes

Long hidden from Western eyes, the spice routes carried billions of dollars worth of goods. Thousands of camels would reach terminal cities, pay a fee, and pass on to their destination. No one stopped them - Christian, Mohammedan, or Jew. Seizing camels was roundly condemned; the taking of a ship - "piracy." Unseen, the spice merchant ruled the world through his agents. His caravans proceeded quietly - protected by the king and blessed by the priest.

Basic Geography - Deserts

There are four major deserts that run from the Atlantic in the west to the Pacific in the Far East. The Sahara runs the width of North Africa, then next, the Arabian Desert. Then, on the Iraq- Iran Deserts, and last - the Gobi Desert to the north of China. An "Arab" could slip into the Sahara Desert within sight of the Atlantic Ocean in N. Africa and could emerge in China without having been seen by anyone who was not like himself.

Individuals, groups, caravans, armies, and entire nations have disappeared into the deserts, and have followed this route in whole or part secure from the observation of Westerners. Westerners are always surprised at what emerges from these mysterious deserts.

The Desert Caravans

Camel caravans were massive, expensive affairs. In an age where the capture of a single camel would make an Arab rich for life - a train of 5,000 animals was ordinary, and 20,000, frequent. The goods had to be warehoused until shipping time and food had to be provided for both man and beast. Drivers and armed guards had to be arranged, and a paymaster had to pay "protection-money" to local rulers for safe conduct and protection.

Insurance agreements had to be arranged to guard against pilfering and the occasional caravan raid that captured a few camels. Messengers had to be dispatched ahead advising outlets that trade goods were on the way. Schedules had to be met. Marshaling yards had to be ready to receive the thousands of camels and drivers, and then the goods had to divided and new trains created to take the goods to their ultimate destinations. The details were endless - but worth it. The desert route hid its treasures from prying eyes and that alone provided relatively safe travel.

Local rulers were paid to protect caravans. Part of the "trade agreement" between merchant and king was that the local ruler had to make good anything looted from the train while it was under his protection. This encouraged extra vigilance. All who profited from the spice trade had a vested interest in protecting it. They still do.

Marshaling Yards & Terminals

There were major marshaling yards - great trade centres such as Baghdad, Damascus, and Mecca. The city of Jerusalem was another - a fact of geography that helped launch the crusades. From these extensive marshaling yards smaller trains were re-routed to the seaports of Aden, Alexandria, Haifa, Beirut, and Istanbul.

Marco Polo was the first to return to the West with fabulous stories of the spice routes and Cathay. No one believed him. It has only been in relatively recent years as the route has been superseded by ocean routes that the knowledge of the "silk-route" has become public. This forbidden desert roadway is the historical super highway of the wandering Turk.

Part 1: God MUST Bless Trade

Strongly-held religious beliefs can stop trade, and have often done so[1]. When this happens the offending religion has to be "sanitized" before trade can take place. It is most often the Christian religion that causes the trouble because it is "exclusive[2]" while all others are "inclusive." As a rule, traders could not care less about "Christianity," but before they can trade with its people it must be proclaimed far and wide by the religious leaders that "Christianity" has been "reformed, updated," made "New Testament," that it is NO LONGER EXCLUSIVE - that it is open to everyone - especially the trader. Otherwise - the trader cannot trade!

Priests must be found to guarantee that God blesses trade with strangers FIRST - before trade can take place. Gold in the right quarters can secure such guarantees. It can guarantee that even strangers and non-adamites are advanced to the very pinnacle of God's church[3]. Such leaders can then piously sanctify that which God curses[4].

With the Church's new and profitable discovery that "God blesses trade with strangers" - the trade that God had formerly cursed - the wolf was free to safely hunt within the sheep fold.

Immigration & Integration - Religious Matters

The "immigration" of this horde of strangers into a country is half the job - half! If the local population refuses to help them, feed them, speak to them, or trade with them - immigration" alone is useless. "integrate" with them - These foreigners will sit on the side of the road and have rocks thrown at them by the local population while they starve.

Foreign trade representatives must be "accepted" by the local population to transact business. Traders, their representatives, and their families after immigrating into the land, must be allowed to "eat" with their trading partners[5]. They be allowed to trade[6]. Intermarriage must be encouraged because if strangers are allowed to intermarry - all other benefits follow[7]. "Integration" is essential. Only the priest can make that lawful.

Agents of the spice trade use their gold to provide a soap box and high visibility to priests who will speak in favour of the stranger. They are made rich by loudly proclaiming that God wants "IMMIGRATION" AND "INTEGRATION" These priests must state in no uncertain terms that "immigration" and "integration" are God's will" - that they are "lawful" and "desirable" - that they are GOOD! And, that unlawful" and "undesirable" - and opposition to them is BAD! This prevents the wolf and his pack from suddenly being set upon by irate sheep protesting "blasphemy."

A handful of gold properly spent can prevent multi-billions from being lost to wild-eyed fanatics rushing about shouting "We must obey God rather than men." Acts 5:29

Part 2 - King Protector

Getting God on one's side effectively muzzles the populace. Next, agreements must be made with local rulers to protect and guarantee the shipment of goods. Payments for this service to the local ruler are an accepted part of the cost of doing business. Kings have been paid by merchants for this service for a long time[8].

During the crusades, instances were known where hostilities between Christian and Mohammedan armies ceased while the camel train of the spice merchants plodded through a Saracen army besieging a Christian seaport city, and through the open gates into the city. The Saracen guards left the train at the gates and Christian guards took over to escort the caravan down to the docks. There the precious off-loaded onto waiting Christian ships. The goods were Christian ships set sail and passed through blockading Saracen men-of-war on their way to their final destinations in Christendom. Both Saracens and Christians lived up to their agreements and protected the shipments. The goods were safe. The truce then expired and Saracens and Christians returned to killing each other. Both Saracen and Christian rulers were equally in the pay of the spice merchants. War takes a backseat to trade.

Naming The Desert Peoples

Few people actually "live" in the desert. This means that the people who furnished most of the desert travellers live on the rim of these deserts. Western claim to territorial jurisdiction has forced these desert people to "name" the bounds of the territory in which they presently reside - an alien concept to populations that live on the move. An incomplete list consists of Morocco, Algeria, Libya, Egypt, Palestine, Jordan, Saudi Arabia, Turkey, Iraq, Iran, Afghanistan, Turkmen, Kazakh, Uzbek, Pakistan, India, Tadjik, Kirghiz, and Mongolia.

Periodically, vast migrations of these people take place. Entire nations fold their tents and vanish into the desert to emerge months later, hundreds, even thousands of miles away, to the astonishment of nearby peoples. The nation most often targeted for invasion was China because of its wealth. China kept armies permanently posted on the frontier and built a wall to keep these desert invaders out. It didn't.

These invaders of China were basically all the same people. The Bible named them "Arabs"[10], The Chinese named them differently. Each group of invaders were identified by their invasion, the name by which they go by today.

Those of the "Hun" invasion are called "Huns." There are also Seljuks, Ottomans, Khazars, and Mongols, to name only a few. The same people, different invasions, different names. The name "Turk" appears most frequently as part of the name of Seljuk-Turk, Ottoman-Turk, Turkaman, Uzbek-Turk, Khazar-Turk, etc. If these desert people were to go by a single name - a universal name - perhaps "Turk" would be that name.

Mohammed

In Mecca lived an ambitious person named "Mohammed." He said that he was Allah's spokesman. Mecca was the marshaling yard for spice caravans arriving from all over the world. Mohammed and his followers were driven from Mecca. He and his followers fled north to Medena, a city sitting astride the spice route from Mecca to Baghdad, the route to Alexandria, and the one to the Far East. Soundly ensconced in his new city, Mohammed forbade spice caravans to pass. For almost a year hundreds of thousands of camels sat idle consuming enormous amounts of forage. Caravans backed up all the way to China. Armies were sent to dislodge him. Medina had water - the armies in the desert didn't. They failed.

At last, the great spice merchants had had enough of the squabbling. The word was sent to the rulers of Mecca to make whatever concessions were needed to start the caravans moving again. Mohammed's demands were simple enough. He demanded that he be accepted as the prophet of Allah, and, that he rule both Mecca and Medena. This was agreed. With the combined armies of Mecca and Medena, Mohammed quickly conquered the Christian Arabs, Jewish Arabs, and Anamist Arabs living throughout the rest of Arabia. They were all converted to Mohammad's "Islam," and Mohammed became the most powerful person in the Near East. Under his rule "Islam" exploded in all directions.

Arab-Hun Invasions

(1) Arabs poured out of Arabia into the Near East. (2) They next invaded Egypt. (3) Then they crashed through the defenses of the Byzantine Empire and annexed what is now Turkey. (4) Failing to take Constantinople they changed direction and poured across N. Africa, (5) and invaded Spain. (6) Failing in their effort to invade France, (6) they invaded Sicily (7) and S. Italy. (8) The Arabs, now called "Turks", overwhelmed Constantinople and drove into Europe proper, (9) where they were aided by the Huns of Hungary (early Arab invaders) in their attack on Austria. (10) Additional invaders - Seljuk-Turks, (11), Ottoman Türki 2) and Mongols added numbers at various times. The most recent and most successful is the Khazar-Turk invasion (14) which subdued Russia and smashed a German revolt. It is under their auspices that Turks are flooding Italy, France, Germany, Britain, Scandinavia, America, S. Africa, and Australia - in a massive - and thus far uncontested continuation of the Crusades.

Many years before Mohammed, a group of "Arabs" invaded China and were named "Huns." They vanished back into the deserts and emerged near the Black Sea where the E. German "Goths" lived. They were defeated in France, and their powerful leader Attila was killed by Ildico in 453. Ildico was the daughter of a German prince on whom Attila forced an adulterous marriage[11]. The Huns then retreated to Hungary (9 on the above chart) where they still live. At the time of Attila a large number of them had converted to a "trade- Christianity." It made it easier to do business. Later, when the Islamic invasions came, many converted to Islam. Today, most are again "Christians."

During the Hungarian revolt against the Soviets, hundreds of these Hungarian "refugees" swarmed into Virginia. I worked at the Virginia Unemployment Commission and interviewed many of them. Most were dark skinned shifty-eyed types, not at all like their newspaper and magazine pictures. I was surprised at their appearance and their reluctance to do farm work. They would take a farm job and "disappear" two weeks later. I had no realistic idea of what a "Hun" was.

Arab Invasions

The "Arabs" in Arabia, inflamed by the teachings of Mohammed, invaded the Near East: (1), Egypt (2) and proceeded to crash through the defences of the Byzantine Empire right up to the gates of Constantinople itself. In the process they annexed the province of what is now "Turkey," killing or subjugating its adamite population. (3)[12]. The fortifications of Constantinople held back Islam - for the time being.

Next, the Arabs swept across North Africa (4), again killing its considerable adamite population, conquering or and crossed over into Spain (5) where they drove the "Visigoths" into the mountains of the northwest. They ruled Spain for almost 1000 years before the Goths emerged from the mountains and drove them back to N. Africa, leaving many still living in the land. This remnant converted from Islam to Catholicism and were called "Morescos" by the adamite-Goths. Great numbers of Moresco descendants live in Spain today. Some of the invading Arabs converted to Judaism. These also converted to Catholicism. They were called "Maranos." The descendants of both are usually easy to identify since they look like their ancestors, the Arab/Turks, and still speak Spanish with a Saracen accent.

These Morescos and Maranos, good Catholics but undesirable in Spain, were encouraged to migrate to Spain's colonies. Many joined the armies of the Conquistadors overseas who invaded and settled South and Central America. The Arab/Turk is well represented in the bloodstream of today's Hispanic peoples. They no longer follow Islam or Judaism, but are good Catholics. "Hispanic-Turks" would be a better name for them. It's important to know that Turks profess all sorts of religious beliefs, but first - they are TURKS! It explains a lot.

Arab invaders next crossed the Mediterranean Sea and conquered Sicily (6). From Sicily they invaded southern Italy (7). Both Islamic Sicilians and Southern Italians converted to Catholicism. Their descendents still speak Italian with Saracen accents, and most look like their Saracen ancestors -"Sicilian" and "Italian-Turks." One cannot tell them apart from Turks living in other lands.

Turk Invasions of Turkish Lands

After the initial Arab conquest subsided, a new invasion of Turkish peoples flooded the Near East. These new invaders were called Seljuk-Turks (10). They were the same people as the people already living in the Near East, but having a different name. They quickly adopted Islam and the Arabic language, and merged in with the local population and became indistinguishable from them. Next:

Ottoman Turks

On the heels of the Seljuk-Turks came the Ottoman-Turk invasion (11). Same people - different name. They too learned Arabic adding many of their own Turkic words. They also adopted the Islamic religion and became almost indistinguishable from those they conquered. The Ottoman-Seljuk-Arab "Turks" completed the conquest of Constantinople and stormed into Europe where they populated Albania, Bulgaria (occupied by Bulgars), and left Turk enclaves in what is now Yugoslavia. Many of these invaders switched to "trade-Christianity." The Ottoman Empire lasted until WWI, and it is presently in the process of forming into something else under different leadership.

Ottoman Strategy Of Conquest

When the situation permitted, the Ottoman-Turks avoided direct assaults on lands they wished to occupy. They would infiltrate a family at a time until the population was largely Turk, and then the entire country would fall to the Turks by default. When they could, the Ottomans followed the custom of their kinsmen, the Huns and the Mongols, and used the armies of the peoples they conquered, rather than use their own.

Mongols

The Mongols were kinsmen of the Turks. They conquered both China and India, and occupied the Near East for a time (12). Some stayed and were absorbed. Some were driven away. They practiced all different religions - with sanitized "Christianity" predominating. They were strong

On "Christianity" because they thought the crusaders would win. The crusaders' defeat caused them to switch to Islam Instead[13]

They ruled in the Russias to the north. The Rus-Slav alliance fought these invaders for hundreds of years until they were finally defeated. First called "Mongols," they were later called "Tartars," and lastly, lumped with others practicing Islam, they were called "Turks." In 1917, a Khazar-Turk alliance with the Slavs overthrew the Russ-Slav ruling alliance. The Khazar-Turks secured rule over what had formerly been the entire Russian Empire - a vast land area.

Khazar Turks

The Khazar Turks settled on the lower Russian Rivers in the 7th Century. They were tax-collectors for the Mongols and much hated by the Slavs. The Academic American Encyclopaedia has this to say about them.

"Khazars (kah'-zars) "The Khazars, a Turkic people—dominated substantial parts of S. Russia during much of the 7th through 10th centuries. During the 8th century the Khazar aristocracy and the kagan (king) were converted to Judaism.—and for 4 centuries thereafter this Jewish empire held the balance of power between the Christian Byzantine Empire and the Muslim Caliphate.

—The Khazars controlled many of the trade routes to the Orient; some of the Radhanites (Jewish merchants from Gaul), for example, were accustomed to crossing the Khazar empire while travelling to and from China and India.—In 965, Svyatoslav I, Duke of Kiev, decisively defeated the Khazar army—new waves of Turkic invaders overran the remains of the Khazar state[14].

The Khazar-Turks, defeated in battle and fleeing Ottoman-Turk and Russian-Slav rule, fled into Europe seeking refuge. The arrival of these numerous strangers attracted the attention of the Catholic Church, who virtually enslaved them for its own use. Their adopted religion, Judaism, allowed them to do what the WORD forbade Christians to do - "usury banking." By using these Khazar-Turks the Church could accrue the benefits of usury without incurring its curse [15]. In Spain, Britain, and the U.S., economic interests caused many to convert to "trade-Christianity.

The Turks' Dream

Aided by Catholic Church toleration, Khazar-Turks became and are today the world's leading factor in banking. They have also become the leading factor in media and trade. Where Ottoman-Turks were once the undisputed leaders - the Khazars have now assumed leadership. Originally desert nomads, they moved to S. Russia and Poland. From there they established enclaves in London, New York, San Francisco, Odessa, Johannesburg, and Palestine. In Palestine the Khazar-Turks are presently embroiled in territorial and religious disputes with Palestinian Ottoman-Turks. This is an ongoing thing among Turks over which only Westerners seem to become upset. The ally of the Islamic- Palestinians is Islamic Iraq. Iraq is being manhandled by the "Christian" armies of tributary Western states in true Turk style.

Turk control of the world's religious establishments which bless international trade is absolute. No priest, mullah, or rabbi may appear on Turk media who does not proclaim that "immigration" and "integration" of the ruling Turks (and others selected by them) - is god's will.

Regardless of who emerges as leader - the thousand year old objective of the Turkish crusades remains - the conquest of Europe. Europe is being flooded "Ottoman-style" with Turks from Morocco, Libya, Egypt, and Iran - one family at a time. Even the remote lands in the very north - Norway, Sweden, and Scotland receive their share. To bolster their numbers - blacks, Indians, and "children of the East" (Orientals) are recruited and imported. The Turk-owned media refers to the invaders as "poor abused refugees."

In America, the invasion of Mid-east-Turks is swelled by Hispanic-Turks, plus ancillary blacks, and "children of the East." The exact same situation exists in S. Africa, Australia, and New Zealand - the other Western lands.

The present invasion has gone further, conquered more, and inflicted more casualties on Christendom than all the other invasions combined. But, the Turk does what he does only because the priest blesses his acts and stands holding the door for him[16]. The Turk is not to be blamed for doing what Turks do.

The Teachers

Strangers cannot trade if God will not allow it. The one who allows it is the one who blesses that which God curses. He is God's enemy[17]. The false priest must declare the wolf to be an "honorary sheep" before the wolf may enter the sheepfold to eat sheep. It is the Lawless priest[18], the serpent whom God placed in high dignity - to instruct us - his true priests[19]. God wants MEN. He doesn't want pansies, sodomites, sleazes, liars, and scam artists. To keep those he selected from becoming such, he gives them daily examples of what he does NOT want, and prominently displays them on TV for the schooling of his own.

One stands in the pulpit and rails against sodomites - but is careful not to reveal the penalty for fear of losing the Turk's gold[20]. The next rails against government debt - but sells bonds to his flock and makes usurers of them." Another cries over the awful Communist Chinese suppression of "Christians" and a stranger stands in the pulpit beside him.

The "WORD made flesh" has graciously given us these, and countless other examples, so that we can learn and teach our brothers to see the Lawlessness that is bringing the curse of God on the nation. There is no better way! Understand what the Turk does, but don't blame him for being what he is. He is a hunter. He does what God put him here to do. The scribes and pharisees, on the other hand, are the ultimate examples of evil. God made them and gave them the job of being false-teachers. They have committed the unforgivable sin punishable by death[23].

Knowing not to murder, they condone it. Knowing not to kidnap - they bless it. These scribes and Pharisees are damned by God - to them Law and Lawlessness are the same. They are not "ignorant," they know what they do. On them, prayer is wasted[24]. We see and pity, and cannot help. They are the living dead, and are kept here on display by God as living examples of evil. "Because thou has done this, thou art cursed above all—and dust ("Dust: Heb: aw-fawr, - "clay," "mud," rubbish." Strong's Concordance) shall thou eat all the days of thy life. " Gen 3:14. In these serpents the spirit is gone and "rubbish" is their mouths.

God in his wisdom has provided the wolf, the snake, and the antichrist to teach his children. They are wonderful teachers - we are good students. We must care for what God has provided. We must protect them from harm. Without them our task would be immeasurably hard. With them - people have begun to yearn for the protection of God's Law - and the Law and the Lawmaker cannot be divided[25].

"I created man from the invisible and visible... I appointed him ruler... to have my wisdom ... I called his name Adam and showed him the two ways ... and I told him 'this is good, and that is bad' that I should learn whether he had love toward me, or hatred, that it be clear which in his race love me." Enoch 30:12-14

UNFILTERED NEWS

RUSSIA REGULATES RELIGION: The Russian parliament is ready to pass restrictions on imported religion. The "trade- religion" of Russia is the "Orthodox Church." It served first the Tzars, next, the Communist Party, and now it serves the present government. "If you don't obey the government you go to hell - after you first get what you deserve."

Anything the current government says or does is "great." It is "sanitized religion" in its purist form and staffed with government agents. Russian rulers must regulate new religions to see that they stay within set limits. There is nothing worse for tyrants than an unregulated god running loose spreading unfounded rumours, making claims, and demanding rights. The Orthodox Church was organized 1700 years ago to prevent that.

Letter From South Africa by K.J.

"Dear Mr. Hoskins: I was hoping for clarity here in S. Africa by now. Instead, confusion abounds. The Conservative Party is the large White opposition party - it is now larger than De Klerk's party, but De Klerk refuses to hold elections.

"A woman with a daughter in intelligence told me they think the ANC killed Hani, the radical black ANC leader. That makes the arrest of Clive and Gaye Derby-Lewis strictly political. Without Gaye, the "Patriot," a newspaper for Whites, is of little use. These two people have worked long for harmony between the English speaking and Afrikaans speaking White S. Africans.

"Murder of whites has become so frequent as to not be worthy of notice by the papers. My husband increasingly tells me to tighten security and he is right, but what a way to live.

Our thoughts are with the Christian Patriots in America. The wolf-connection in S. Africa is turning to the same "Waco" and "Ruby Ridge" tactics here. The arrests of the Derby- Lewises are an example.

"So many of our people have lost their jobs, and consequently everything else. The numbers are much more than in 1930. Back then the state made work on roads, dams, etc. Not now. The authorities will not even lend a white family a tent even when they have no where to go. But, affirmative action places blacks in high paying jobs for which they have not the least training. They do not pay more than 10% tax and receive special medical insurance also.

"A white man who has a printing firm and does a lot of work for the ANC understands black languages. The talk among blacks is to 'rape all white women and kill all white people. He said this will happen when they win the election. Our survival is no longer in man s hands. "I find myself increasingly at odds with people who appear "unconcerned" over our future." K. J. - South Africa
