THE BRITISH

FASCIST OPINION.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT

The Apology

THE new Editor of BRITISH FASCISM commences this resumption of the papers activities by presenting to the regular subscribers the most ample apologies on behalf of all concerned for the lapse of these activities during the last few months. The loss of both the joint editors and the dislocation of normal activities during a period of re-organisation have resulted in an interregnum which is now at an end. Unlike the orthodox modern politician, Fascists are to be judged by their works rather than by their promises and we feel therefore, that an apology would not be worth offering nor worth accepting unless it is accompanied by the resumption of the regular issue of the paper at intervals of not less than one month from the issue of the present number.

The First Announcement

After a period of something over a year at 22, Stanhope Gardens, the British Fascists are removing to more convenient quarters. The new address will be announced later.

The Second Announcement

On 22nd. December 1st certain members of the Executive Committee of British Fascists, Ltd., met together and formed a new association to be called The British Fascists' Association of which they themselves were the original members. The Association has no official connection whatever with the company, but it is permitted to use the Company's offices until such time as it may be deemed expedient to acquire a Separate office. Intimate co-operation between the two bodies is assured by the fact that the principal offices in both bodies are in the hands of the same individuals. By mutual arrangement, the activities of the British Fascists have for the present been divided between the Company and the Association. As long as the present obsolete system of the distribution of the franchise is maintained, it is necessary to organise political activity within the framework of that system. This function will be carried on by the Company. The organisation of such protection as may be required to prevent these political activities from being hindered or disturbed by violence will be carried out by the Association, as well as any political activities outside of the framework of the present system. Such arrangement does not of course preclude protection activities by the Company or Parliamentary activities by the Association should their respective Executive committees deem it desirable.

Current Events

IN Austria, the Dollfuss government continues to progress towards its inevitable end. The attempt to crush genuine Fascism, the only force feared by the Socialists and the Viennese Jew, by means of fascisised Conservatism under a centre party premier is already breaking down, in spite of certain apparent successes which are much paragraphed in the anti-German press. The real Fascist party is usually referred in our Press as the Nazi party, is being driven underground, but the numbers continue to increase. Those who adhere to the fascisised Conservatism of Starhemberg are beginning to realise that Austria is faced with the choice between two alternatives Fascism and Germany on the one hand; or Socialism and France on the other--and that there no third course possible; and once this is realised; there can be no difficulty in taking the first alternative. That Dr. Dollfuss appreciated the signs of the development hitch is steadily progressing was evidenced by his threat to appeal to Geneva, an open treason to the German race, which must have given an exceptional stimulus to recruiting for the Austrian Nazis. It may fairly be taken as marking the beginning of the end.

The fate towards which the course of events was thrusting the reluctant Dollfuss as well defined by a leading article in the chief liberal daily paper in this country, which after: referring to the pacts and declarations with which the League of Nations would protect Dollfuss concluded with the caution that in return the League would require him to make terms with the Socialists and thus mobilise behind him the only party capable of saving democracy in Austria."

The Threat of placing the government at the disposal of the league forced the hand of Starhemberg's party, who commenced openly to seize control in parts of Austria, and this in turn forced the hand of the Socialists, who came out into the open. From their urban fortresses, under the pretext of workmen's dwellings, and filled with workmen's families as an unconscious screen for their machine-gunners, the Socialists delivered their challenge to the government, and after a short spell of miniature civil war were severely defeated and finally disposed.

The comparison of this episode with the bloodless and efficient method in which the stronger and better equipped German Red party as dealt with by Hitler has not been lost on the minds of many observers. The difference of method is well illustrated by the pronouncement of Dr. Goebbels the inauguration of the Ministry of Propaganda at Berlin.

"There are two ways of making a revolution. A party can shoot down its opponents with machine guns until these opponents realise the superiority of these who are in possession the guns. This is by far the easiest way of making a revolution. But it is also possible to change the nation by revolution of spirit and thus, instead of crushing the opponents, one will be able to win them for the new ideas and the new state. We National Socialists have chosen this way. To win the whole of our people for the new state be our foremost task in the new Ministry." That the operation of this method has not been possible in Austria has been primarily due to the interference France and of its hand maiden the League of Nations.

Fascised Conservatism of Starhemberg now finds itself in an anomalous situation. Austria is not able to stand alone; the revival of its old Empire is out of the question. But an alleged interview with Starhemberg supplies the key; the accuracy of the interview is immaterial. It attributes to the Fascised Conservatism now in control in Austria the hope that the spirit of Hitler may appeal to the North of Germany rather than the South, and that the day will come when Germany will split on the old natural lines of cleavage of North and South, and that Austria will again reconstitute her Empires as the leader of Southern Germany. The hope to profit by a division of Germany and a revival of the old rivalry of Austria and Prussia is sufficient to stamp the present rulers of Austria as destitute of the true Spirit of Fascism.

It is not without a certain satisfaction that we remember that ever since the perpetration of the Treaty of Versailles, we have always contended that the only effective means by which the enemies of Germany could have effectively obstructed her development would have been by throwing Austria at once into Germany; thereby increasing the Weight of the Southern influence, and perpetuating that internal division which has always prevented the German people from realising its destiny; and by the creation at the same time of a large, powerful, and independent Hungary. Happily for the future of Western Civilisation, the makers of the Treaty of Versailles failed to apprehend this policy, and preferred to attempt to suppress Germany by continued pressure, which has only succeeded in welding her together in a manner which would not otherwise have been possible. They are now appreciating the possibilities of Austria when the opportunity is irrevocably gone. Wisdom fifteen years too late is often worse than useless.

The enemies of Fascism, having repeatedly failed in their attempt to defeat it from without, are now preferring the characteristically Jewish methods of disrupting it from within. The Press shows frantic desire to see Italy in antagonism to Germany over the Austrian question. Most Fascists at least will hope that these rumours are nothing more than journalistic kite flying. It is hardly credible that Italy will leave her natural line of development for adventures on the Danube. If she does so, she may force Germany to seek an understanding with Yugoslavia, which might lead Germany into the revival of the old Austrian policy of the "Drang nach Oesten" and might well end in the isolation of Italy.

Those in other countries who put their faith in so-called National Governments supported by Jewish interests, or who hope to find salvation from some form of fascised Conservatism, would do well to study the development of events in Austria Dr: Dollfuss probably a genuine lover of his country, with excellent intentions, has cheerfully sat down to supper with the devil and is beginning to realise that his spoon is far too short.

Ominous references to the Saar how the continued determination of France to prevent or postpone the return of that territory to Germany, by every possible means. Anti-German papers; whilst admitting the German character of the Saar, suggest that the countries which used to be known as the "Allies" should combine to prevent the return of the Saar to Germany; unless and until she returns to the League of Nations. These people would plunge Europe into war in a futile attempt to save the face of the League, which in fact has very little face left to save. And yet they scream themselves hoarse in protesting to the public their love of peace.

The disarmament farce has progressed to this extent, that the British Government, has at least admitted the discovery, that it is impossible to restrict for ever a great nation to a position of inferiority. This is indeed a fig from thistles, and the first real fruit gathered from the disarmament conference.

Nine months ago, before we had given in our allegiance to any Fascist party, in an independent pamphlet, we wrote as follows:--

"Germany does not desire war—her rulers will not lightly jeopardise their great achievement by submitting it to the test of a renewal of hostilities.

Therefore she would welcome Peace; but it must be a real Peace. And such A peace involves a radical revision of the Treaty of Versailles.

All disabilities imposed upon Germany by that instrument must be abolished; and foremost amongst these is the restriction of that right to arm which every free country enjoys, except in so far as it restricts that right by its own voluntary action.

The restriction of Germany's right to arm was imposed upon her by force; and it is solely by the threat of force that it is maintained.

A great nation cannot be held for ever in such a position of inferiority; nor can she submit to it and retain her self-respect.

Germany must have the same freedom to arm as her neighbours. If it is not granted to her; then in justice to herself she must and will ultimately take it and ask no man's permission. And if the resumption of hostilities follows, the fault will not be hers."

The untimely death of the King of the Belgians has left another opening for those who fish in troubled Waters. 'The Flemish Movement which has been in progress in Belgium for many years, has always had a natural tendency to lean on Germany in its struggle with the French speaking Walloons, and Germany deliberately encouraged it before the war. Socialism, however, which was strong in Belgium, held back the Flemings from German influence; and the circumstances of the war: produced much lasting antagonism to Germany among a large part of the Flemings. The great revival of German Nationalism in the last twelve months cannot fail to have its repercussions in Belgium. Not only does it strike a responding cord in Flemish Nationalism, but also the identity of Fascism under the name of National Socialism with the German revival will draw the Flemings from International Socialism into Fascism, Already there is a growth of Flemish Fascism, and it is likely to develop rapidly. The inclusion in Belgium of two districts taken from Germany adds a German movement. Here is a situation full of possibilities for those who desire to drag us into a war on the side of France against Germany. The repression of German sympathies in Austria hardly Commends; itself to the British public as a good and sufficient cause for joining in war. But if a cry could be raised that the Germans were again attacking Belgium, public sympathy Might easily be aroused. The development of the whole situation needs watching. The new king is reputed to be a worthy son of his father and there can be no higher praise. But the task of maintaining equilibrium between the two incompatible and rapidly diverging sections of his subjects will be a very severe test of his abilities.

Cuba continues to provide a striking illustration of the result of the principle, that every small nationality has the right to misgovern itself as it pleases the inhabitants have for months been busy in converting what should be a garden into a wilderness and a charnel house. Meanwhile, the great power, which tamely threw away, on It paltry and formal pretext; the responsibility which she had wrested by force from another, is troubled by no qualms of conscience and is busily engaged in waging financial war upon her neighbours, and in the exhilarating pastime which is epigrammatically known as "rocking the gold boat in order to tumble out the passengers."

The Press agencies indulge from time to time in portentous rumours of formidable concentrations of Red Armies in the Far East: If Russia concentrates a first class army in the Far East, and enters upon a first class war, she will achieve a first class disaster, and considerably accelerate the advent of the day when she will be rolled back out of Asia. While the Soviet are drinking themselves into a truculent and optimistic humour out of the golden vessels looted from the temple of Western Civilisation, a hand more powerful than that which wields the Hammer and Sickle has written, "Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin," over the dream of Peter the Great.

At Home, the month of January, 1934 will be remembered as a landmark in the history of Fascism. On the 10th of that month the Daily Mail posters display the inscription, "Hurrah for the Blackshirts and a leading article revealed the momentous news that Sir Oswald Mosley's party had acquired another wealthy, and influential godfather, Able and willing to Officiate in his own person, and the support of oily of the great organs of the Press. We do not suppose that these Goliaths of the Press are likely to be even conscious of any modest pebbles which may come from our scrip. But, select one point out of many; we would record our frank amazement at the astonishing statement, whose deliberate blindness has almost something of the Nelson touch.

"British Trade Unions are well-conducted industrial organisations, playing an indispensable part in the economic life of the nation, whereas similar bodies in many continental countries devote themselves solely to political intrigue." We acknowledge the attractiveness of this beatific vision, but we seem to have heard of certain undisputed political activities by our trades unions which must raise a smile in many readers of this idyll of the Daily Mail.

In any case we are grateful to Lord Rothermere for re-christening Sir Oswald Mosley's organisation the "British Blackshirts"; and we had hoped that the British Fascists would no longer be in any danger of having greatness thrust upon them by being credited with such operations as the activities on the Tithe front or with the exquisite courtesy which characterises some of the "British Black-shirts" organisers. Alas, the best founded hopes are often doomed to disappointment. On the 18th February we were confronted with a flaming poster of that paper sometimes quoted in the German press as the "Jew friendly Referee" giving the startling announcement, "Many British Fascists arrested." For a moment we wondered if Mr. Baldwin was following upon the trail blazed by Herr Dollfuss and pictured to ourselves the vacant chairs at our H.Q. and the familiar figures associated with them embarking on that journey which ends in the amenities of Dartmoor. But our anxieties were relieved when we found that the reference was only to eighteen Blackshirts who had been arrested by order of the Home Office on the Tithe Front: From past experience we know that it is useless to correct such statements but we were glad to see that other papers with less Semitic proclivities were content to attribute these antics to the party which is really responsible for them. We give the alliance about twelve months.

Lord Rothermere's paeans of eulogy on Sir Oswald Blackshirts called forth an immediate anti-phone from Lord Beaverbrook to the effect that this country could never consent to Fascism, as that would involve the loss of our Empire, which rested upon the principles of Western Democracy. There is so much that is admirable in Lord Beaverbrook's Empire policy, and his determined attacks on the Socialist Measures of the present Government, that we are sometimes reminded of the rich man who came very near to salvation, but who, upon being confronted with one more thing needful, turned away sorrowfully, for he had a great position. We look forward to some period in the future when Lord Beaverbrook will realise that the one great obstacle to his Empire Policy is that very same obsolete and discredited system miscalled Western Democracy; which, like so many others, he still holds in superstitious veneration. In its present form it is not a British product, but a reimport which has been refashioned abroad out of all recognition. It is utterly inconsistent with national sentiment and with continuity of policy without which an Empire policy is impossible. It is now being used at Westminster in dissolving the bonds of an Empire which was built up in spite of it by the energy and initiative of the man on the spot. We believe that Fascism is the only means by which that Empire can be saved from destruction, and preserved for a greater destiny. And when we say "Fascism" we are not thinking of the Blackshirtism extolled at the present time by the Daily Mail. H.C.B.W.

The Horst Wessel Song

THE song usually referred as the Horst Wessel Song, is on the lips of every German Fascist, but it is very little known in this country:

Indeed, there are some who do not know whether Horst Wessel is the name of a man or a place.

In Order to assist in remedying this defect, we give to our readers a translation of the song into English, followed by a short notice of the author.

To render into another language verses which have been able to kindle flame in the soul of a reborn nation is not an easy task. The translator has preferred to abandon the exact rhyming of the last word of the first and third lines in most cases, and to be content with a similar long vowel sound, rather than sacrifice the swing of the verse.

No attempt has been made to translate the expression S.A. which stands as in the original.

TO THE GERMANY THAT IS TO BE

Up with the flag! Our serried tanks press forward.
S.A. moves on with steady swinging stride.

Our comrades, by the Red front and Reaction slaughtered,
March in the spirit ever at our side.

Down the clear street the brown battalions streaming!
Down the clear street resounds the storm troops' tread!

Bright from the Hackencross new hope for millions gleaming
And dawn the days of freedom and of bread.

The trumpet soon shall sound the final onslaught.
We stand prepared: and ready' for the fight.

And soon shall Hitler's banners wave o'er street and fortress.
The end of knavery's tyranny insight!

Up with the flag! Our serried ranks press forward, S.A. moves On with steady swinging stride.

The spirits of our comrades, by the Redfront slaughtered, March in our ranks for ever at our side.

From the German of HORST WESSEL,
English translation by H. C., BRUCE WILSON

Horst Wessel, the author of the above song, was the elder of two sons of a German parson, Dr. Ludwig Wessel; born at Bielefeld on 9th October, 1907, he spent his childhood at Mülheim in the Ruhr but in 1913 moved to Berlin, on his father's appointment to the Church of St. Nicholas there. On the outbreak of war in 1914, Dr. Wessel volunteered as an Army Chaplain, and served in that capacity first on the Western and afterwards on the Eastern front. Horst Wessel was intended for the legal profession, and having duly passed a classical course became a law student, first in Berlin and afterwards in Vienna. Always politically inclined and intensely nationalist in spirit, after the usual membership of students' corps, he became a member first of the Bismarck League and afterwards of the Viking League. But he failed to find what he desired until in the summer of 1926 he came in much with the National-Socialist party. He became an enthusiastic and active member, and by May, 1929, was leader of No. 3 Troop in Berlin. Under him was developed the celebrated No. 5 Storm Division, which achieved the honour of becoming a special object of hate and fear to the Red terrorists. He declined offers of promotion in other parts of Germany, preferring to carry on his work in Berlin.

His younger brother Werner Wessel, who had also joined the party, had lost his life on 23rd December, 1929, being one of a party from the Ski Group who were caught in a violent snowstorm on that day, and frozen to death before they could be extricated. The Communists had for some time past determined to find an opportunity to rid themselves of Horst Wessel, who frequently shifted his quarters. It happened that the landlady of a room which he took at 62, Frankfort Street was a member of a Communist organisation. On the evening of the 14th January, 1930, she reported to her Communist CO., that Horst Wessel was at her house. A party was immediately got together, under a Communist leader named Albrecht Höhler, by profession a pimp and bully in the lower haunts of Berlin, and commonly known as "from the tattooed oriental pictures with which his body was covered; with him was one Elsie Cohn; the party consisted of about a dozen persons many of whom were Jews. Introduced by the landlady; they knocked on the door of Horst Wessel's room, and as he opened the door himself, expecting a friend, Höhler fired into his mouth. Other shots were fired, and Wessel fell to the ground, horribly wounded. The gang hastily ransacked the room for papers and withdrew.

Horst Wessel was removed to hospital, where he lingered for some weeks in great pain, dying on the morning of 23rd February. At his funeral, on the 1st March, the attendants were limited by police orders, and accompanied by a police escort. At one point they were attacked by a Communist crowd collected for the purpose, who endeavoured to seize and smash the coffin, but were eventually driven off by the police.

The perpetrators of the murder were apprehended and brought to trial. They pleaded in defence that Horst Wessel had incited the public against the State and against the Jews. They received most inadequate sentences and Rückert, found guilty of wilful Murder and being in possession of firearms without a licence, to 6 years 1 month's penal servitude. Kandulski, for wilful murder only, one year less. The remainder were given terms of imprisonment, Max Sambrowski, 2 years, Willi and Walter Sambrowski, 1½ years each, and Eslie Cohn and Foneck, one year each. The landlady who had invited the murderers in and shown them the room was given eighteen month's imprisonment. And the four remaining members of the party had our four mouths' imprisonment each as accessories.

Horst Wessel did not live to see the regeneration of his country for which he laboured, amid for which he sacrificed his life. But to-day when his countrymen are gathered together, and, as a symbol of that regeneration, unite in singing the song which he made for his Storm-troopers, his spirit is always with them, and so realises the words of his song, The spirits of our comrades by the Red front slaughtered, march in our ranks for ever it our side." H. C. B. W.

General Outline of Policy

The following which represents a general outline of Policy is being printed for and issued to enquirers. It is proposed to deal with the various points singly in greater detail in subsequent issues.

ARE you a loyal subject of H.M. the King, and do you believe in supporting the Monarchy against all who would abolish it by force or otherwise?

Do you believe in Nationalism and in the duty of the Government to consider the interests of its own subjects and citizens before those of any alien individuals, bodies, communities; races or nations whatsoever? Do you believe that the institutions of the family and the right of the individual to own property are an essential part of human civilisation; and that it in the denial of these which constitutes slavery; and do you therefore oppose all those who would abolish the family and the right of the individual to own property under such reasonable restrictions as the laws may impose?

DO you believe that the Government exists for the purpose of governing and not for the purpose of providing place and power to groups or individuals; do you therefore support the principle that the qualification for holding any office shall be the loyal; competent and honest performance of the duties of that office; and that whilst those main performance shall receive their due reward; those who fail in such performance shall cease to hold such office.

Do you believe that the Franchise is given for the purpose of assisting the Government by the due representation of all the useful activities of the country, and not for the purpose of providing everyone above a certain age and not certifiably insane, with a valuable possession which he may give sell, or disuse as his fancy may dictate.

Are you therefore prepared to support the policy that the present absurd and antiquated distribution of the franchise on a geographical basis shall be replaced by a re-organisation of the franchise on a vocational basis, such as that which is technically known as the Corporate State And you also approve the policy that every subject shall not necessarily be a citizen. That the admission of a subject to citizenship shall be granted only to such as are physically and mentally fit to fulfil the duties which it involves. That all persons having a dual allegiance shall be refused admission to, or suspended from citizenship, while not necessarily affecting their status as subjects. That naturalised aliens shall not be admitted to citizenship except in rare cases and in recognition of eminent services rendered. That conviction for certain offences shall involve suspension of citizenship and that mental degenerates and habitual criminals shall be suspended permanently?

Do you believe that the grant of self-government to any community can only be justified by honest and efficient admiration, internal unity, and loyalty towards the whole of which that community forms a part. That the granting of such powers should therefore, in the first instance, be limited and provisional, and that their confirmation and extension should depend on the degree: to which the above Mentioned qualities have been realised in practice?

And do you therefore believe that a policy of federation of such communities, which have not had an opportunity of exhibiting such qualities, or have failed to exhibit them as far as they have had the opportunity, is a policy which is fundamentally unsound, begotten in folly, and destined to end in disaster.

Do you believe that the numbers and armament of the defensive Forces of this country must be determined by the needs of this country, and the emergencies with which they may be called upon to deal, and not by the persuasions or threats of my foreign countries; collectively or individually?

And do you believe that the maxim still holds good that "when a strong man armed keeps his palace, his goods are in peace." And do you therefore believe that governments or parties which boast of having heavily reduced the armaments of their country, in face of a general increase of armaments by their neighbours, stand self-convicted of a criminal attempt to obtain a cheap halo for themselves at the price of the lives of those whom it is their duty to protect, and that the effects of this dangerous dereliction of duty should be remedied without delay?

Do you believe that alternative periods of scarcity or plenty can be, and are created at will by international manipulation of currency, and are you willing therefore; to support such measures as may be necessary for the establishment of a national currency, as independent as possible of the operations of international or foreign financial groups.

Do you regard the Obey of encouraging class war as detrimental and detestable; and do you believe in advocating and promoting the principle that all persons engaged in any activity or industry should work together as a team for the success of that activity or industry as a whole. And do you believe that those countries whose activities develop that spirit will thrive and prosper, whilst those in which every activity is divided against itself will fail and perish?

Do you believe that it is the duty of a government to achieve and maintain the highest possible standard for all its subjects? And do you recognise that International standards of Wages and labour conditions must have the effect of depressing the higher standards to a low average level.

And do you therefore believe that any Government which consents to such restrictions being imposed on its subjects for the possible advantage of subjects of other countries is committing a gross breach of its duties?

Do you believe that a prosperous Agriculture is an essential element in every country? That the idea that Agriculture must be sacrificed for the prosperity of Industry is false, and that assistance given to industry by such means is artificial and unsound? That the so-called assistance being given to agriculture to-day is a farce and a fraud, designed to deliver what remains of Agriculture bound and gagged into the clutches of the Socialist Octopus? And that the first needs of Agriculture to-day are protection from dumping and unfair foreign competition, adjustment of unfair taxation, and liberation from the interference of meddling bureaucracy which sacrifices agriculture to the advancement of a political theory?

Do you believe that the machine was made for man, and not man for the machine?

Do you therefore oppose the Socialist system which would reduce the majority of mankind to the status of the mechanical parts of a soulless machine? And do you believe that government should foster the encouragement and reward of individual initiative within the bounds of loyalty and reasonable control?

And do you believe that the extinction of all individual enterprise by large impersonal combines must result in the destruction of that initiative and character without which a nation cannot survive; and that it is therefore the duty of government to preserve and protect the yeoman farmer and the small trader in the reasonable and beneficial exercise of their respective callings, instead of facilitating their destruction by giving privileges and immunities to those large impersonal organisations which seek to ruin them for financial profits or political gains?

Do you believe that religion is as essential part of civilised human existence? are you, therefore, opposed to those who denounce religion as the dope of the people, and who attempt to destroy all religion either by force or ridicule?

Do you believe that the proper function of a government is neither that of a privileged competitor against its subjects in Commerce and Industry, nor of a cattle drover controlling herds of human cattle: but rather that of an administrator guiding the activities of men without hampering their initiative; of a judge who gives impartial decisions without favour of class or interest, and of an executive which ensures that those decisions are implicitly obeyed.

Do you believe that long and enduring prosperity is impossible without some continuity of policy? And therefore that the present system, which provides frequent complete changes of policy at short intervals, does for that reason obstruct all solid progress and every effort at recovery?

Do you believe that the theory of different mental and moral characteristics of races is not a sham and an imposture, but solid reality?

And do believe that the extent and strength of the British Empire today is due to the administrative capacity of the British race, of a greater combination of tolerance and firmness, a more honest and a more impartial justice, and a capacity for more efficient co-operation, than could be found in other races Which have had similar opportunities?

Do you believe that the work of building in our Empire is still far from completed; and that the completion of this Work is a great responsibility; a great duty, and also a great privilege and that it calls for the exercise of that quality which most differentiates the man from the animal the power of creation?

And are you therefore opposed to the sale of this great birth-right for the miserable pottage of Internationalism, which is Offered to us by those who mask their own slackness or incompetence under the theory of the right of every small nationality to misgovern itself as it pleases?

Correspondence

The following letter was received at the beginning of December, but was held over owing to the temporary suspension of publication. We hope to deal with the Semitic questions in a future issue.

Sir,---Having just returned from Germany, the "land of terrorism," I should be extremely obliged if you would publish the following letter, so that my dearly beloved English people can hear the truth about this Much discussed country. I have been an eyewitness of the Fascistic Revolution (in other words Nazi) in Germany from beginning to end, and must declare, that never, in the whole history of the world, has there been such a perfect and bloodless revolution. I am only 18 years of age, but am an ardent follower of Fascism, and intend in the near future to join your ranks. What I have experienced has certainly opened my eyes to the Jewish menace. Too long have the Jews been allowed to agitate nations against one another, and slander peace-loving peoples of the world, by their international network, and impudent disregard of all that is truthful and honest.

I am living for the day when the British nation awakens to the danger of these sons of Israel. Having no country they can call their own, the Jews naturally cannot understand the national feeling, and therefore make it their business to set up international parties; agitating the honest labourers into believing that internationalism, in other words; Socialism and Communism are true friends of the proletariat. Germany, thanks to Hitler, has, in the nick of time, become aware of this threatening menace, and has struck the death-blow to the slimy, nauseating Jewish yoke.

On seeing that their World power was being threatened by "this man, who calls himself the rightful leader of Germany," they decided to poison the minds of the outside world, by manufacturing low lies of "Nazi atrocities" and "Fascistic terror," that were supposed to have taken place in Germany. The fact that within 4 hours such "atrocious fairy-tales" were distributed in all countries of the world only helps to expose that Jewish tentacles are spread out all over the world. Frequent: protests were sent by the German authorities to the Press of the world, especially American and English, but I am sorry to say with no avail.

As a defence-measure against this devildom of "the chosen race," the German Government: was forced to take drastic steps, thus declaring war on all Jewish shops and warehouses. One can see that through the treachery of their Jewish brothers the German Jews had to suffer inexorably. I appeal to all right thinking people of England, to put themselves in the shoes of the Germans, who after suffering as we in the Great War; have gone through a period of utter strife since the signing of the Armistice. Revolution, followed on by inflation, piled themselves upon the long suffering Germans, and threatened to destroy their morale! The Galician Jew of Eastern Poland, always on the alert for victims whereupon they can settle and suck out the life and soul, saw in this weakened Germany a good prospect of expatiating their international schemes for world mono-poly; Thanks to Hitler, their vile plans have been frustrated. For years, Germany had been in the throes of warfare a hornets' nest for strikes, lockouts, and social corruptions.

Just for reference sake, I will quote a few statistic's, showing how deeply the Jew' had dug his claws into the social life of Germany. 70 per cent of the mandates in the Reichstag were Jews! 48 per cent of all medical men were Jews! 43 per cent school doctors, 68 per cent. Welfare doctors, 80 per cent theatre managers, 54 per cent lawyers, and 50 per cent teachers, not to mention their participation in many other professions and activities.

Practically all the great corruption scandals were caused by Jews, take for instance Leo and Willi Sklarek, Ivan Kutisker and the Barmet brothers.

Little do the people know of the underhanded activities of Jewry, for the Jew always makes it his business to work the dark, undermining all that is precious to us, namely — God, King, and Country.

I hope this letter will give your readers substance for thought, so, that we in England may have an opportunity of defending ourselves against this threatening menace. Believe me, clear Sir, I am, Yours faithfully, (Signed) Kenneth Green
