Calling The True Israel Peoples

Editorial

Dear Readers,

The Savvy Consumer

The Wise Farmer

A poignant article appeared in the Tapwire News blog on the need of farmers to develop an outlet for their produce it also behoves people who have relied on supermarkets to get to know their local farmers and small-holders and buy from them where possible.

The savvy farmer can see the writing on the wall.

Can see that slavery to a system of national and global manipulation – totally out of his/her hands – is a recipe for disaster.

Such a farmer will be on the look-out for a secure local market; one where purchasers want to buy direct from the farm with no middle-man taking a cut.

This must be the way forward if a secure future on the land is the desired outcome. Any intelligent farmer will recognise this and will take seriously a bona fide request to supply farm-raised produce to those eager to buy it.

The savvy consumer will be looking for fresh, healthy, flavourful good quality foods upon which to raise their family, or simply to feed themselves. They will recognise that the chance to acquire such food ‘direct from the farm’ represents the best possible outcome. A bond built-up with a local farmer, via regular purchasing of their farm raised products provides a powerful ally for times ahead when the commercial food chain is subjected to the brutal intervention of the architects of global control and shortages become the norm. Such times are no longer speculative. They are on our doorstep.

The Savvy Farmer and the Savvy Consumer – getting together

Either the consumer or the farmer can take the initiative of bringing both parties together.

How?

By calling a ‘round table’ meeting in the local village/town hall or simply in your home. Invite one or two farmers to sit round that table with some individuals eager to obtain food direct from the farm. Some might even be ready to discuss contracting a farmer to grow the staple foods they require. Good quality food grown without recourse to chemical pesticides. By coming out of the beast system Yahweh will bless and protect us. Praise Yahweh!!

The Origin of Talmudism (Part 2)

By Pastor Eli James

The Book of Esther leaves off at approximately 450 to 430 B.C.

IN ORDER TO TELL THE STORY of the Judahites from this point to the time of Christ, we must turn again to secular history (Josephus, Pliny, and Philo, the Alexandrian Judahite) and the Apocrypha as well as other Judahite literature such as the Pseudepigrapha and the Dead Sea Scrolls.

The Pseudepigrapha are distinguished from the Apocrypha by the fact that neither Protestants nor Catholics consider them canonical although they are nevertheless Israelite literature. The Apocrypha are considered canonical by Catholics.

From the above discussion and examination of relevant historical documents, I can say that I am not aware of any historical evidence which even remotely suggests that any form of sectarianism, either from outside the Levitical priesthood or within the Levitical priesthood, took place in the land of Judah until the time of King John Hyrcanus, around 150 B.C. No exact date can be given for the creation of the sect of the Pharisees, but most scholars place their origin around this time.

The history of the House of Judah from 430 B.C. down to the time of Christ is divided into four periods:

The Persian Period, 430 to 332.

The Greek Period, 331 to 167.

The Maccabean Period, 166 to 63.

The Roman Period, 63 to Christ and after.

Continuing now with Josephus: Chapter 8 relates how the Syrians were defeated by Alexander the Great and how the Judahites concluded an alliance with him. Relevant to our documentation of the genealogical history of these Judahites is a statement concerning the Samaritans, a group of Syrians who lived just north of Judea:

"----the Samaritans—seeing that Alexander had greatly honoured the Jews [sic], determined to profess themselves Jews; for such is the disposition of the Samaritans, as we have already elsewhere declared, that when the Jews [Judahites] are in adversity they deny that they are of kin to them, and then they confess the truth; but when they perceive that some good fortune hath befallen them they immediately pretend to have communion with them, saying, that they belong to them, and derive their genealogy from the posterity of Joseph, Ephraim, and Manasseh."

Note that Josephus is declaring that the Samaritans were prone to impersonating Judah when it was politically expedient to do so. This type of Jewish duplicity is evident to us today as well, for in America they fervently praise the "separation of church and state" while in Israel, they are Jewish despots practicing a Jewish theocracy.

Here in the story of the Samaritans we get another clue as to how the impostor group is coming into being. Again, the use of the word 'Jew' for both 'Judahite' and 'Judean' by the translator is a good example of not keeping distinctions clear.

The English word 'Jew' did not come into existence until a much later time in history (1600's) when the confusion of the terms 'Judean' and 'Judahite' by various historians had become commonplace.

The German word 'Jude' is subject to the same problems. The Samaritans, as pretend Judahites, were simply perceived by outsiders to be Judeans. These outsiders did not make any distinctions between Edomites, Judahites and their mixed offspring. Nor did they understand the differences between the Mosaic Law and Pharisaic "law." Josephus is telling us that the Samaritans claimed to be Judahites when and if there was political gain to be made therefrom. Many of these same Samaritans eventually were absorbed into Jewry, although their origin is most likely that of half-breed Israelites of the tribe of Joseph.

Even at this point in time, the Judahites referred to themselves as "Judah", not as Judeans. A good modern parallel is the word 'German' which is used exclusively by outsiders to refer to the German people, who refer to themselves as 'Deutsch,' a word derived from 'Teuton.' The Greek word 'Ioudaios', meaning Judean, is incorrectly translated as meaning Jew, for the word 'Jew' implies a different meaning than would either 'Judean' or 'Judahite.'

W. G. Finlay, late editor of the periodical, the Covenant Message, has this to say regarding this great impersonation: "According to Josephus Antiquities of the Jews the name 'Jew' first came into existence with what is generally called 'the return from the Babylonian captivity [actually, Josephus doesn't say that; his translators do!]"—

I find it very significant that prior to this time, the word 'Jew' was unknown. Why, in the Masoretic text which is a Jewish work is there no reference to 'Abraham the Jew' or 'Moses the Jew'? This surely tells us something but so few are prepared to open their eyes and see the depth of the masquerade which is having such a disastrous effect on the TRUE Israel people."

W. N. Saxon, in his booklet, "The Mask of Edom", says, "Judaism's masquerade as Biblical Judah and, moreover, as all Israel which is the basis of Jewish Nationalism becomes patently counterfeit when placed in juxtaposition with the historical record of the true Houses of Israel and Judah.

Even a brief summary will show the contrast between the descendants of Biblical Jacob-Israel as opposed to the alien posterity of the cabal which claims for itself not only the Promised Land but the very name and inheritance of Israel ." p. 8.

Envy by the Canaanites over the Israelites and their heritage is recorded in the Book of Psalms:

" For, lo, thine enemies make a tumult: and they that hate thee have lifted up the head. They have taken crafty counsel against thy people, and consulted against thy hidden ones . They have said, Come, and let us cut them off from being a nation; that the name of Israel may be no more in remembrance.

Petra Capital of The Ancient Kingdom of Edom

For they have consulted together with one consent: they are confederate against thee. " 83:5. The "hidden ones" are the lost tribes and those who have forgotten their true heritage. This envy is nothing more than the lust Esau has for recovering the inheritance which he so foolishly and steadfastly rejected. The Edomites are confederate against true Israel because Esau, who is still in rebellion against God's Law, is the forefather and the animating spirit behind Edom and Judaism.

In addition to Josephus, I and II Maccabees tell us of the struggles of the Judahite leadership to liberate themselves from Greek domination.

They should be read in conjunction with Josephus in order to get a full appreciation of the difficulties, in terms of internal squabbling, Canaanite intrigues and external military threats that the Judahites faced. (The reader should understand that what is being retold here is a mere sketch of this period of history, and only the most salient points are being discussed. Reading Josephus and Maccabees is highly encouraged.)

Upon the death of Alexander the Great, the fortunes of Judah changed for the worse. Alexander's empire was divided among his generals, and two of them, in turn, fought over Judea. In response to the invasion of Antiochus the Great, the Maccabeans revolted and gained independence from the Greeks at the cost of ongoing warfare.

Due to the pressures and intrigues of war, it was at this time that infighting among the Judahites for the High Priesthood, and much intrigue resulted with one faction allying themselves with Antiochus while the other faction allied themselves with Ptolemy of Egypt. It was shortly after that the sects known as the Sadducees, Pharisees, and Essenes arose; and the story of the House of Judah cannot be appreciated without understanding the power struggle that was going on among them.

Very briefly, the Sadducees can be said to be pro-Greek. The Sadducees usually consisted of the Judahite upper class and the reigning High Priest. These were influential people holding positions of political power.

More than likely, they favoured the cosmopolitan life style of the Greeks, with its games and spectacles and sophistication, to the rigid doctrines of the Mosaic Law a striking parallel to our "modern" Christian "leadership," which has become very secular!

The Pharisees, on the other hand, as the favourites of the Herodian kings, held authority, if not respect, over the common people of Judah; and it seems that their power was not to be denied. (The modern parallel here is Christian Zionism! Compare the power of the Jewish Neo-Cons in today's Bush administration.

The Bushes

The Bush family might as well be the reincarnation of Herodian dynasty!) Several Judahite leaders, such as John Hyrcanus and Alexander Jannaeus, had their lives made difficult by opposing the Pharisees. The Essenes seemed to be a more monastic group which included a branch of Cenobites who took vows of celibacy. All of the available evidence suggests that it was the Essenes who took most seriously their Israelite heritage and obeyed the racial law against intermarriage. (Christian Identity today, thank you!)

The Essenes, therefore, diametrically opposed the Pharisees, seeing them as hypocrites and usurpers.

Judas Maccabeus (a Judahite, not a Jew!) arose as a great spiritual and military leader and successfully fought off Antiochus and even subdued the Idumeans and Ammonites to the south. Judas was so successful that he nearly regained all the territory which belonged to the Twelve Tribes before the captivity!

After the Maccabees successfully evicted the Greeks, the Samaritans, seeing the difficulties of the Judahites somewhat abated, for the time being, renewed their claim of kinship to Judah.

While the nation of Judah was fiercely defending itself against Greece, the Idumeans were already forming an alliance with Rome, plotting their move against Judah when the inevitable defeat of Greece came at the hands of the Romans. Judah, being fully occupied defending herself against Greece, and not given to making deceptive deals behind the scenes, was not prepared for the Roman juggernaut.

With the Roman occupation, behind-the-scenes intrigue by both Judahite and non-Judahite candidates increased, and the priesthood fell more and more into corruption. Josephus relates that "Alcimus, who was not of the high priest stock," became High Priest.

The continuous warfare was taking its toll on Judah's spiritual life. The situation grew worse and worse until, finally, Antipater, an Idumean, gained influence with John Hyrcanus, a Maccabean. Antipater talked Hyrcanus into conquering Idumea and making Judea and Idumea one kingdom, thus tending to mingle the populations.

It was at this point that the Idumeans became Judeans, for a purely Judahite priesthood would never have accepted Idumeans as fellow citizens.

By this time, the Babylonian influence on the scribes and Pharisees had already allowed them to accept non-Israelite members, otherwise, Alcimus would never have become high priest. Consequently, Hyrcanus permitted them to stay in the combined new country if they submitted to circumcision and subjected themselves to the religious rules and regulations of the high priests.

This was, of course, a disastrous development in terms of distinguishing Judahites from Canaanites.

In a footnote to Josephus, translator Whiston says " This account of the Idumeans admitting circumcision, and the entire Jewish [Pharisaic] law, from this time, or from the days of Hyrcanus, is confirmed by their entire history afterwards—Ammonius, a grammarian, says: The Jews [Judahites] are such by nature, and from the beginning, whilst Idumeans were not Jews [Judahites] from the beginning, but Phoenicians and Syrians; but being afterwards subdued by the Jews [sic] and compelled to be circumcised, and to unite into one nation, and be subject to the same laws, they were called Jews [Judeans -- EJ]."

Dio also says: 'That country is also called Judea, and the people Jews [sic]; and this name is given also to as many as embrace their religion, though of other nations.' " Antiquities, Chap. 9.

The racial confusion bred linguistic confusion, and the rabbis have exploited this linguistic confusion in their historical pretence as Israel and Judah. The above quotes demonstrate why we should always distinguish between Jews and Judahites.

The Jews have done everything possible to influence Christian and secular historians into equating Jews with Judahites; but as can be plainly seen, the history of Jewry and Judaism begins with this edict of John Hyrcanus.

Thus, properly understood, this is an excellent commentary and verification of our main argument: that a non-Israelite people called Jews adopted, by virtue of their half-breed relationship to Israel, some Israelite customs and kept the name for themselves! Also clearly expressed here is how the distinction between Judahites (Israelites) and Judeans became blurred, eventually to be forgotten, with the word 'Jew' substituting for both! Indeed, had these developments not taken place, the prophecy concerning Israel's lost identity would never have been fulfilled. (See Psalm 83:3; Isa. 29:10-12; 42:16,19-20; 49:2; Hos. 1:9,10; 2:6; Matt. 13:44; Romans 11:7,8,25.)

While the modern Jews, the inheritors of the "Traditions of the Elders", have claimed continuity with Israel from that day forward, true Israel, the Anglo-Saxons plus the remnant of Judah, eventually forgot who they were and lost their identity!

It is one of the most important marks of Israel that God foretells true Israel's forgetfulness. The Anglo-Saxons have indeed forgotten their true heritage. In contradistinction, the Jews have always claimed to be the Chosen People! So, who is True Israel, those who fulfil the prophecy or those do not?

John Hyrcanus (above) was succeeded by Aristobulus I and then by Alexander Janneus, who was a most cruel and corrupt monarch. He made a habit of killing many of his own people and is reported to have crucified eight hundred Judahites at one time and slit the throats of their wives and children while they watched from their crosses kind of like George W. Bush sending True Israelites out to Iraq to be slaughtered by the Zionist war machine!

Alexander was succeeded by his wife, Alexandra, who made a league with the Pharisees. She did this because Alexander, on his death bed told her that all his troubles were due to having opposed the Pharisees and joining ranks with the Sadducees. He thus advised her to cease hostilities with the Pharisees if she did not wish to fall into the same tragedy.

Alexandra was succeeded by her son, Hyrcanus III. But, Hyrcanus III and his brother, Aristobulus II, fought with each other over the throne, Aristobulus II realizing that the nation was being taken over by non-Israelites. But then the Romans entered the scene and concluded a pact with Hyrcanus III and Antipater, the Idumean, thus defeating Aristobulus II.

Upon Hyrcanus III's death, his sons, in turn, struggled to regain the leadership, but Antipater murdered two of them and finally installed his own son, Herod, as monarch of Judea. Judah was at its ebb. Around 60 B.C., Herod the Great, a half-breed Idumean Jew (and now the word is correctly applied), became petrararch of Judea, a collector of tribute money for the Romans.

Thus ended the valiant struggle of the Judahites to remain a distinct people and culture under their own rule. It is important for us to realize that the struggle to maintain the genealogical purity of Israel continued even down to the time of Christ. In spite of all the corruption and seed-mixing at the upper echelons, there were still numerous pockets of pure-bred Israelites in and around Judea, especially of the tribe of Benjamin in Galilee.

One of these settlements, known as Nazareth, was to be the home of Jesus, the Messiah. In fact, the Galilean Benjamites rarely entered Jerusalem; and, remember, Peter was found out because he had a Galilean accent!

Absolutely crucial to our understanding of this history is this most salient fact: After the return from captivity, the remnant of the House of Judah had to perform its function of bringing the Messiah into the world. Christ could not have been born except through pure-bred Judahite stock! That is why Matthew, Chapter 1 and Luke Chapter 3 so meticulously record Yahshua's genealogy.

Judah's leadership down to the time of Christ was accepted by a succession of prophets, priests, kings, priest-kings, and national heroes. For the record, the succession of pure-bred Judahites that ruled the House of Judah during this period is given here:

The Judahite Succession of Leadership

Judahite Leader - Associated Contemporary Leader

(The Ptolemies are the Greek kings of Egypt who reigned after Alexander the Great. Ptolemy Philadelphus commissioned Eleazar to translate the Hebrew books into Greek for the Alexandrian Hebrew community. Eleazar sent 70 -- or possibly seventy-two -- scribes to Alexandria. Around 260 B.C., they produced what is now called the Septuagint, a translation into Greek of the Torah, the five books of Moses, plus other books).

(Antipater was appointed procurator of Judea by Caesar. This marks the beginning of the Idumean (Jewish) ascendancy over Judah. It also partially fulfils Isaac's prophecy to Esau (Edom) that one day Esau would break Jacob's yoke from off his neck. (Gen. 28:39-41.) The complete fulfilment of the prophecy did not occur until the impostor State of Israel was created in 1948.)

Herod the Great	Julius Ceasar Augustus Caesar

(Antigonus struggles with Herod to regain the throne for Judah but is unsuccessful. He is killed by Mark Antony.) It was to be the function of the "good figs" of the House of Judah to fulfil the prophecy of the coming of the Messiah. The

"bad figs", on the other hand, were to become a "taunt and a curse" in the various lands to which they were scattered. The bad figs are those who intermarried with non-Israelites and became known as the Jews. These bad figs were the ones most responsible for the deicide on the cross. They were to dwell in Judea (Palestine) until 70 A.D. before being scattered themselves.

With the advent of the Herodians and the Pharisees, the time is now ripe for the coming of the Messiah: Mosaism (Hebrewism) in Judea is being replaced by the "traditions of men," the Pharisees. Judaism (Pharisaism), thanks to Herod and his henchmen, is displacing the Levitical priesthood.

The Pharisees (above), although experiencing opposition from the Sadducees, have gained control of religious and civic life. True Judah is struggling for its survival. Jews are usurping Judah's claim to the Covenant. God appears in human form in the person of Jesus Christ.

Jesus, knowing better than any human being the difference between a Judahite and a Jew, declared "I come not but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel," (Matt. 15:24) for "He would not walk in Jewry, for the Jews sought to kill Him." (John 7:1.)

It is imperative that we understand our true history in order to determine exactly where and when the Jewish heresy began to displace the Mosaic Law. Consequently, it is an anachronism to refer to any Judahites before 150 B.C. as Jews! They were Judahites who practiced the Mosaic Law. They were not mamzers who practiced Talmudic Judaism!

I cannot stress these distinctions enough. Like the differences between X chromosomes and Y chromosomes, you have to know the religious, cultural and racial differences between Jews and Judahites in order understand true history. It is imperative that we understand these distinctions between Judahites and Jews. Otherwise, Judaism will triumph over True Israel in her ignorance!

I hope this historical analysis has been sufficiently clear so that we can recognize how the Jews have created a false history for themselves so as to confuse even our most erudite scholars, even such scholars as E. Raymond Capt and Howard B. Rand.

Here are the historical facts: The Pharisees are the originators of the religion known as Judaism. As usurpers later empowered by King Herod, who was an Idumean/Edomite put in place by the Roman authorities over the people of Judah, who were Not His Racial Kin, the Pharisees began to infiltrate the priesthood of Judah at all levels.

The historian, Josephus (who was not a Jew but a Judahite whose family was of the first of the 24 courses, hereditary families in the service of Israel and Judah!), tells us that, with regard to the ruling priesthood, Herod had all of the racial Judahites murdered and replaced with Edomites!

Now do you see how the transition from Hebrewism to Judaism really took place? It all started shortly before the time of Christ.

The modern parallels are, again, very striking, as the anti-Jewish Christian priesthood was replaced by the Judeo-Christian priesthood during the 1960's, with the advent of Judeo-televangelism and "Christian" Zionism: the scum that go by such names as Jerry Falwell, Pat ("Let's take out Chavez") Robertson, Billy Graham, Tim LaHaye, Jack van Impe and let's not forget Rush Limbaugh and Sun Yung Moon. I feel very secure in declaring that American Israel has a much more accurate view of our true history than British Israel.

The British Empire has been a lackey of Jewish international finance since before the American Revolution. Remember, folks, the Jewish bankers were the ones who instigated King George against the Colonies. It was Jewish debt money imposed upon the Colonies that was a major reason if not the major reason for the revolt of the Colonies. The Americans did not want to be the debt-slaves of the Bank of England.

The Federal Reserve

American Israel is under no illusions about economic reality today. We know that the Federal Reserve System is just another Jewish banking fraud; and we are not going to deny our mistakes, in the interests of nationalism, to make ourselves look good.

Having established the fact that the ancient House of Judah absolutely contaminated itself with Babylonian teaching at the time of John Hyrcanus, the question still remains as to what extent the House of Judah allowed Babylonian teachings to creep in at any time before this during the Second Temple period.

Isa. 37:31-35, tells us this:

And the remnant that is escaped of the House of Judah shall again take root downward, and bear fruit upward: For out of Jerusalem shall go forth a remnant [recall Ezra 9:8], and they that escape out of Mount Zion: the zeal of Yahweh will accomplish this.

Therefore, thus saith Yahweh concerning the king of Assyria, He shall not come into this city, nor shoot an arrow there, nor come before it with shields, nor cast a bank against it. By the way that he came, by the same shall he return, and shall not come into this city, saith Yahweh. For I will defend this city to save it for mine own sake, and for my servant David's sake ."

This verse is telling us that Yahweh intends to defend Jerusalem for a future purpose. The expression "take root downward and bear fruit upward" is can only be a reference to the Second Temple Period, for there was no other revival of the Mosaic Law! And it concerns keeping Jerusalem alive for a time, which means keeping His Law and His priesthood alive, until Jerusalem fulfils its purpose. That purpose is the coming of the Messiah, Jesus Christ, and it is declared in the following verse:

"The sceptre shall not depart from Judah until Shiloh come." (Gen. 49:10)

It was at this time in history that the Judahite dynasty of King David ended with Jesus Christ in the land of Judah. But thanks to Joseph of Arimathea, this bloodline dynasty was transplanted to Britain in 37 A.D. By ship, Joseph took Mary, mother of Jesus, Mary Magdalene, Lazarus, and nine other Saints with him to Avalon, now known as Glastonbury, where he built the very first Christian Church.

One of the nine, a maiden by the name of Penardim, the niece of Mary, and therefore a Judahite, married into the royal lineage of the Silurian Dynasty of Britain: the one and only King Llyr (Lear). Thus the dynasty of King David was transferred to Britain through Penardim. The Judahites of Anglo-Saxon Europe had already intermarried with the Lost Ten Tribes (the House of Joseph), so that the Dynasty of Joseph and the Dynasty of Judah had been remerged, thus fulfilling the prophecy of the merging of the two sticks in the hand of Yahweh (Eze. 37:16-19). Glory, HalleuYAH!

“Word for Word” Deuteronomy Part 26 Translation by Stephen Howard Anderson

Chapter 33

1. And this is the blessing that blessed Mosheh the man of Elohiym the children of Yis'rael before his death.

2. And he said, "Yahweh came from Siynay 5514, and rose up 2224 from Seiy 8165 to them; He shined forth 3313 from Mount Paran 6290, and arrived 857 with myriads 7233 of sacredness 6944: from His right hand a fiery 784 law 1881 for them.

3. Yea 637, He cherished 2245 the people; all His sacred ones 6918 in His hand: they assembled 8497 at His feet, they carry away His words 1703.

4. Torah commanded to us Mosheh. The inheritance 4181 of the assembly 6952 of Yaaqob.

5. He was in Yeshurun 3484 King 4428, when gathered the heads of the people together the tribes of Yis'rael.

6. Let live Reuben, and not die, and be few in number."

7. And this of Yahudah: he said, "Hear Yahweh, the voice of Yahudah, and to his people bring him: his be sufficient 7227 for him; and a help 5828 from his adversaries 6862 be."

8. And of Lewiy he said, "Your Tummeycha 8550 and Ureycha 224 be with your holy 2623 men, whom you tested 5254 at Massah 4532, with whom you strove 7378 at the waters of Meriybah 4809;

9. who said to his father and to his mother, "I have not seen him;" neither did he acknowledge 5234 his brothers, and his children he did not know: because they have observed Your Word, and kept Your Covenant.

10. They shall teach Your judgements to Yaaqob, and your Torah to Yis'rael. They shall put Your incense before Your nose, and a burnt offering 3632 upon Your altar.

11. Bless Yahweh, his wealth 2428, and accept 7521 the work of his hands: smite through 4272 the loins 4975 of those who rise against him, and those that hate him from rising again."

12. Of Binyamin he said, "The beloved 3039 of Yahweh shall dwell 7931 in safety 983 by Him: and covered 2653 over all the day, and between 996 His shoulders 3802 he shall dwell."

13. And of Yoseph he said, "Blessed of Yahweh be his land, from the choice things 4022 of the sky, for the dew 2919, and for the deep 8415 that lies 7257 beneath 8478,

14. and for the precious 4022 crops 8393 from the sun 8121, and the choice things put forth 1645 from the moon 3391,

15. and the chief things 7218 of the ancient 6924 mountains 2022, and the choice things of the everlasting 5769 hills 1389.

16. And for the choice things of the land and its fullness 4393, and the good will 7522 of He that dwelled 7931 in the burning bush 5572: let come upon the head 7218 of Yoseph, and upon the top of the head 6936 of those consecrated 5139 from his brothers.

17. As the firstborn 1060 of a bullock 7794 is his glory 1926, and the horns 7161 of a wild bull 214 as his horns: with them the people he will push 5055 together 3162 to the ends 657 of the land: and they are the multitude 7233 of Eph'rayim, and they are the thousands 505 of Menashsheh."

18. And of Zebulun he said, "Rejoice 8055, Zebulun, in your going forth; and Yissaschar in your tents.

19. The people to the mountain they shall call; there they shall slaughter sacrifices of righteousness: because the abundance 8228 of the seas they shall suck 3243, and of covered treasures 8226 hidden 2934 in the sand 2344. "

20. And of Gad, he said, "Blessed be he that enlarges 7337 Gad: he dwells as a lion 3833, and tears in pieces 2963 the arm 2220 with the crown of the head 6936.

21. And he saw 7200 the first 7225 part for himself, for there, in a portion 2513 of a lawgiver 2710 he was seated 5603; and he came 857 with the heads of the people, the righteousness 6666 of Yahweh he did, and His judgements 4941 with Yis'rael."

22. And of Dan, he said, "Dan is a cub 1482 of a lion 738: he shall leap 2187 from Bashan 1316."

23. And of Naph'taliy, he said, "Naph'taliy abounds 7649 in favor 7522, and is full 4392 of the blessing 1293 of Yahweh: sea-ward 3220 and the south 1864 you shall possess."

24. And of Asher, he said, "Blessed with children be Asher; let him be acceptable 7521 to his brothers, and dip 2881 in oil 8081 his foot 7272.

25. Of iron 1270 and bronze 5178 be his door bolts 4515; and as your days, your strength 1679."

26. None 369 is like the El 410 of Yeshurun 3484, Who rides upon 7392 the sky as one who helps you 5828, in His majesty 1346 on the clouds 7834.

27. Your refuge 4585 is the Elohey 430 of old 6924, from under the arms everlasting: and He shall drive out 1644 from before you the hated enemy; saying, "Destroy 8045 them!"

28. Shall dwell Yis'rael in safety 983 alone 910: the fountain 5869 of Yaaqob upon a land of corn 1715 and new wine 8492; also his skies shall drop down 6201 dew 2919.

29. Happy 835 are you, Yis'rael: who is like you, O people saved by Yahweh, the shield 4043 of your help 5828, and that is the sword of your majesty 1346! Will be found liars 3584 your hated enemies to you; and you, upon their high places 1116 shall tread 1869.

Chapter 34

1. And went up Mosheh from the plains 6160 of Moab, to the mountain of Nebo, to the top of Pisgah, that is over before Yericho. And showed to him Yahweh all the land of Gilead unto Dan;

2. and all Naph'taliy, and the land of Eph'rayim and Menashsheh, and all the land of Yahudah unto the western 314 sea, 3. and the Negeb 5045 and the round 3603 of the valley of Yerecho, the city of palm trees 8558, unto Tsoar.

4. And said Yahweh to him, "This is the land that I swore to Ab'raham, to Yits'chaq, and to Yaaqob, saying, 'To your seedline I give it.' I have caused you to see it with your eyes, but to there you shall not pass over."

5. So died there Mosheh, servant of Yahweh, in the land of Moab, according to the Word 6213 of Yahweh.

6. And He buried him in a valley in the land of Moab, in front of Beyth-Peor 1047: but does not know any man of his sepulcher 6900 unto this day.

7. And Mosheh was a hundred and twenty years of age when he died: his eye was not dim 3543 nor his strength 3893 fled away 5127.

8. And wept 1058 the children of Yis'rael for Mosheh in the plain of Moab thirty days: so ended 8552 the days of weeping 1065 and mourning 60 for Mosheh.

9. And Yahshua son of Nun was full of the spirit 7307 of wisdom 2451; because had laid 5564

Mosheh his hands upon him: and listened to him the children of Yis'rael, and did that which commanded Yahweh by Mosheh.

10. And did not arise a prophet since unto Yis'rael like Mosheh, that knew Yahweh face to face,

11. in all the signs and wonders which sent Yahweh to do in the land of Mits'rayim to Par'oh, and to all his servants, and to all his land,

12. and in all that Mighty 2389 Hand, and in all the great reverence 4172 which showed Mosheh in the sight of all Yisrael.

CHAPTER 34 NOTES

This last eulogy for Mosheh really gets to me. To speak to Yahweh directly, to me, is more than an adam could bear. I can only imagine the fear Yis'rael felt when Yahweh spoke from the mountain. I can fully understand why they asked Mosheh to speak with Yahweh for them. I am overwhelmed when the Holy Spirit speaks to me, and the whole presence of Yahweh would be too much in my present imperfect form as a lowly adam.

The Fall and Rise of Abraham's House (Part 9)

By Adam de Witt

IN 1965 THE BRITISH COUNCIL OF CHURCHES, a body dominated by the Anglican Church, headed by the Queen, published a book called "The Future of South Africa". In it we read, "The Council, while not regarding economic sanctions, at this stage, as likely to lead to a satisfactory solution (ie. the fall of the 'keep ye holy' Laws) of the South African problem (namely apartheid) requests Her Majesty's Government as a matter of urgency to consider what measures are required to ensure that Britain and her citizens no longer act in such a way as to encourage apartheid. The council resolves that an early opportunity be sought to lay before the Foreign Secretary, the report on 'The Future of Spath Africa' and the resolutions of the council arising therefrom and to discuss with him British policy towards South Africa."

In all four of the resolutions concerned, not one reference is made to God, Jesus or the Bible. The Anglican Church (Whose head is the Queen) gave millions of pounds to the ANC enabling it to carry out a campaign of terrorism. Her Majesty's government accommodated, in London, the head officers of the ANC and the SACP, the South African Communist Party, at the same time the Queen's Government Secret Service created, ran and paid for, the Anti-Apartheid Movement (AAM). So much for monarchical protection, so much for the coronation oath.

The Scorched Earth

30 000 farms and all implements were destroyed and the farmsteads ransacked, as shown above.

The remains of 1500 horses wantonly killed by British troops, as were more than one million sheep and goats and hundreds of thousands head of cattle.

That 'blessed' Asoka, Omri, Victoria to Elizabeth 'protection' can best be summed up by these statistics; the man-queen pitted the Empire population of Britain, Canada, Australia and New Zealand of 64 million souls against the Boer Republic's population of just 0.25 of a million (250,000) over a 3 year blitz.

Thereafter the war was carried on by the Queen's Church. Queen Elizabeth is fully aware of what has been done to whites. During her last tour of Suid Afrika, she danced and sang with black children of a black school, to really use a Negro term, 'Getting Down'. Why didn't she go to an Afrikaans' school and dance an Afrikaans dance and learn Afrikaans songs? Because she loves the blacks more. In her 1999 Christmas speech she told all peoples to accept change, in other words, lump what the establishment is doing to you. Is that upholding her Christian oath?

A sad footnote to the above: The Boer folk have been so conditioned to think that treaties with zuwr blacks are OK, that even the most pro-Boer freedom fighters believe Suid Afrika can be shared.

WHO THE BRITISH WERE FIGHTING AGAINST

The 79 year old Burger Van Brakel and two eight year old prisoners of war at Bermuda.

A Concentration Camp child of Krugersdorp.

An emaciated child in the Bloemfontein Concentration Camp

"A policy of extermination of children in South Africa".

(David Lloyd George, British political leader, 1901)

They believe it is fine to have a few Boer states here and there and some zuwr states here and there. The Law says, Drive the Zûwr Out. Suid Afrika will only be free when all the zuwr are driven north of the Zambezi. We see this same nonsense in America where some think the zuwr are entitled to zuwr homelands in the USA, No. drive them out to Africa, Asia or if the Canaanites love them so much, to Palestine!

The Anglican Church has been very active in the United States since it was founded in Jamestown, Virginia in 1607 as the Episcopal Church. 'Episcopal' is an awful sounding word from the Greek to hide its meaning; it means 'overseer'. Its aims are to oversee and manipulate on behalf of its parent, the man-king monarchically-headed Anglican Church. The Anglican Church, like all churches, is Judeo-Christian, that is to say, they dare not offend the Canaanites.

The kings preferred to listen to Canaanites and so an unholy trinity typifies the church age; kings, churches and Canaanites. Together they never had any trouble finding whores who were willing to betray God's Israel children by telling them that God gave kings the divine right to rule; that the Canaanites are God's chosen people; that whites (Israelites) are to universally reconcile (assimilate) with all non-Saxons; that Jesus loves everyone; that Jesus is yet to rule and that Israelite-Saxons are not to get too involved in bettering the world for Saxons because their goal should be a fictitious fake heaven in the clouds (as stated before, they have sold their birthright for a fake, make-believe heaven, a tin-foil halo, and a harp that's probably made in China).

However, Israelites must get involved seriously to defend the King-Priest-Peddler triad and their melting-pot utopia. That is, in a nutshell, wolf doctrine. In America, one family of greedy whores is the Kennedys, who were willing to enforce Asoka's/Omri's laws.

One of the most active bodies to for do (destroy) and crush Israelite 'be ye separate' laws in America's southern states during the 1960's was the Queen Elizabeth's Episcopal Church. We'd sing for God to save her, but never once sang for her to obey God and save those her church was destroying.

Like all the man-kings/queens that went before her, Elizabeth II has a habit of forsaking the Israelites and meeting the unclean. She meets with the unclean Mandela (agent of the queen and her Canaanite puppet show in Babel-ia-ment House of Westminster,) and makes an apology with the unclean cannibals, the Maoris of New Zealand. Her forebears approved the 1840 New Zealand treaty of Waitangi, despite God's Law, "Make no league with the inhabitants of this land." Judges 2:2. "Thou shall make no covenant with them..." Deut 7:2.

The Queen's apology to the unclean was that she rued the day Saxon-Israelites settled New Zealand. She rued the spread of Christ's kingdom. She basically rues this, "If it shall be God's will that we shall succeed in establishing this colony, I persuade myself with His blessing attending us, we may be instruments in planting down in these favoured islands a well-ordered God-fearing community that may stand in these remote regions a sample of the KINGDOM OF CHRIST which like a light burning in a dark place, shall bear no indistinct vision, " words inscribed on a plaque in the main hall of Dunedin's first church by the town's founding fathers. These enlightened men knew who was King and understood where the kingdom was. They were about including New Zealand into Christ's Kingdom! Queen Elizabeth rued the day New Zealand was brought into Jesus' Kingdom! What did God say of the man-king/queens? They Have Rejected Me! Again, so much for upholding the Coronation Oath.

Don't you suppose that this would cause God to hate us? Despite Queen Elizabeth II's coronation oath to uphold God's Laws, her church worked towards race-mixing.

Her church today does the same in England, and everywhere else it overshadows. Britain today is overshadowed by aliens. The people of Britain are losing jobs, homes, families, lives. Women rebel against husbands, husbands are a bunch of S.N.A.G.S. (Sensitive New Age Guys).

The largest growing past-time for these offspring of Vikings and Israelite warriors is needlework! A recent poll showed that in Britain more folks believed in outer space beings (E.T.s) than in God. Children are into Rock & Roll, drugs and race mixing.

The Queen calmly smiles on while her white folk become extinct. (Her granddaughter is 'up-to-date' and "with it" having a stud through her tongue!) Her X-mas speeches are about multi-racial harmony to an Asoka Utopian Commonwealth. We can shout and blame the Canaanites, but they do what is natural to them, the monarchs, however, swore to uphold God's Laws and spare their underlings from all the above.

In New Zealand The 'Crown' preferred love with the heathen than with Boer ethnic kin as it signs the blasphemous treaty of Waitangi.

When the British came to India, it was not to restore the land to God and to spread the Kingdom of King Jesus. It was to bring more wealth to the unholy triad of kings, priests and peddlers. Had the crown wanted India as a dominion for God, it should have driven out the coloureds from the areas it could take.

Instead of uniting with other Israelite-European powers, it fought against them, removing from India the French at Arcor in the South-East under Robert Clive. He took an army to Calcutta and won a battle over the Indians, gaining the state of Bengal for the East India Company. In 1774, Warren Hastings was appointed governor-general by King George III to run Indian holdings.

Rather than drive out the heathen, the kings representative tried to feed them during their many famines; in stark contrast to Jesus' order not to give the bread of the children to the dogs. India suffered famines even back then the famines were the outcome of poor farming methods, paganism and miss-management due to the fact that India is a totally hybridised nation.

While it was the Triad's policy (policy of Monarch+clergy+financiers) to starve the Boer and enslave poor whites and work them to death in the colonies, it would feed the heathen! Those heathen that the empire fed were the offspring of murderers; their forebears committed genocide against the original Indo-Europeans of India. Did the Triad not think that the LORD saw all of this? It was simply a case of 'the Temple of the Lord, temple of the Lord,—we can do all these abominations'.(Jer 7:4-10)

Harold Stough Notes The Principles of Prediction of Gildas The Prophet.

WHOEVER WILL UNDERSTAND, LET HIM TAKE ADVICE AND INSTRUCTION, AND ACT ACCORDINGLY.

1. Let him love God with all his heart, and all his affection, and all his power, and all his understanding, and all the faculties of the soul, and with his whole desire, in all these.
2. Let him love his neighbour with all his energies, as far as that shall not interrupt his love to God.
3. Let him, to the utmost of his power, set free his mind from every thing that is of profit and pleasure, or of any satisfaction whatever to himself or to whom he should love ; and by all means let him free himself from whatever he may fear, and may not love, with regard to himself and his friends; in such a manner as that it shall not be possible to think of any thing in the world that he would desire or reject, either for himself or for his friends, nor any thing that he would wish for or dislike of any person or any other thing.

4. Let him be a moral and religious man in disposition and principle, and godly in conscience, and energetically pious.
5. Let him consider and deliberate upon what he sees in the world, investigating their origin, and nurture, and progress, and instrumentality, and end. Let him observe what has come, what is, and what shall come of them.
6. Then shall he understand what is good, and what is evil, what is becoming, and what is not becoming ; and all that is right and just, and all that is wrong and unjust, and all that is crooked and straight, in word, thought, and deed ; and all that is beneficial and injurious, and all that is beautiful and deformed ; and seemly and unseemly; and true and false; and lovely and hateful; and prosperous and un-prosperous; and weak and strong ; and every beginning and every ending ; and every movement and every resting;

Gildas The Wise, British Historian

and every existence and nonentity; and every thing present and every thing fulfilled, and possible and impossible. And from understanding, and seeing, and considering all these things, he will see what should be, and what should come, and what should exist, and what should have been completed, and what should co-exist, and what of necessity should happen.

And from seeing what he ought, he will know what should be; and from knowing what should exist, and the time when it should exist, and the manner in which it should exist, and the cause of its existence; he will know what God does, for God does nothing but what should be, and in the manner it should be, and at the time it should be, and in the arrangement in which it should be.

And from knowing, and seeing, and understanding what God does, and the manner and time it should be, he will prophesy what should be, and what shall be; and it will not fail to exist in its due time and place.

And thus the holy prophets obtained knowledge of what things God would do, and prophesied of them; and in the same way the prophet bards amongst the Welsh obtained this knowledge, and prophesied the events, and fate, and destiny of their race to the day of doom.

And may God, of his exceeding great grace and gift, confer this knowledge upon every other Welshman, that he may act towards himself and his race according to the will of God in every good. Amen ever. And this is called the Saying of Gildas the Prophet, and he uttered it before the bards of the Island of Britain, where they went to the Gorsedd to prophesy what should befall king Arthur and the race of the Cymry.

The Occult Origins of The Bank of England By Willie Martin

THE OCCULT ORIGINS OF THE BANK OF ENGLAND BY THE MAGICIAN. Much of the history of the last several hundred years can be interpreted as the competition for power between the British Monarchy, or "Perfidious Albion," and its allies, on one hand; and the Vatican and its allies, on the other. Of course, like any overriding theory, this one should not be pushed to an extreme, and it doesn't explain everything. But it explains a great deal.

Much of the history of the last several hundred years can be interpreted as the competition for power between the British Monarchy, or "Perfidious Albion," and its allies, on one hand; and the Vatican and its allies, on the other.

Of course, like any overriding theory, this one should not be pushed to an extreme, and it doesn't explain everything. But it explains a great deal.

A key role in the course events initially took was played by John Dee, the Napoleonic Christian Cabalist and Scientific Advisor to Queen Elisabeth. He introduced the idea that the inhabitants of Britain were descendants of the lost tribes of Israel. It was all part of the British propaganda barrage directed against the Vatican and the European Counter Reformation in the Sixteenth Century.

Henry VIII Wants an Heir

Let's start with Henry VIII. The king of England had not been able to conceive a male heir with his wife Catherine. So he wanted a divorce, which he doubted the Pope would allow. Henry VIII sent his secret agent Richard Croke to Venice in 1529 to consult with the Christian Cabalist theologian Georgi, as well as Jewish Rabbis, on the right way to biblically justify divorce and remarriage to the Pope. There was a conflict between Leviticus and Deuteronomy whether a man could marry his brother's widow, the grounds on which Henry VIII was questioning the legality of his own marriage to Catherine.

This represented the beginnings of an alliance between the British Monarchy and various Jewish groups. The divorce arguments, however, went nowhere. No compromise was ever reached with the Pope. (The British historian, Dame Francis Yates, tells the story in her book, The Occult Philosophy in the Elizabethan Age.)

So Henry VIII finally solved his dilemma by wresting the Church of England out from under the Pope, and proclaimed himself Head of the Church.

Henry was now supreme leader, both politically and spiritually, and did what he wanted with respect to divorce and remarriage. (As for the heir, we now know that the underlying infertility was Henry VIII's own. But from such trivialities do the major events of world history proceed.)

The Vatican was staggered. And it was furious. Not only had the head of a leading nation defied the Pope's authority in spiritual matters, but this same king had set himself up as a rival Pope, so to speak. King Henry VIII was an Anti-Pope. Or that's how the Vatican saw it. The Vatican and the Monarchy were now at war. The war of spiritual ideas and spiritual concepts quickly became part and parcel of the geopolitical war with the chief Catholic power, Spain.

Henry VIII's seizure of the Church of England had to be justified to English-speaking people in a spiritual sense. And so it was. The British had a spiritual destiny, it was declared.

Information Warfare and John Dee

John Dee, the son of one of Henry VIII's court officials, grew up surrounded by this controversy and the mystical currents concerning the notion of British Empire. The latter involved a spiritual as well as a geopolitical aspect: the British were to inherit the earth, and in the process foster the spread of True Christianity. That is, not Catholicism. According to Geoffrey of Monmouth, the kings of Britain were descended from Brut, of Trojan origin. King Arthur, one of Brut's descendants, was considered the chief exemplar of sacred British Imperial Christianity. John Dee identified with this Arthurian notion of Empire, as he believed himself to be descended from the ancient kings of Britain, and was thus himself a distant cousin of the Tudor Queen Elisabeth I.

The Tudor monarchy of Dee's time was glorified as the culmination of the Arthurian tradition, because Henry VIII's break with the Vatican had eliminated the Pope and made the British Monarch supreme in both church and state.

Another line of thought led to the doctrine of British-Israelism, which held that the British were the descendants of the lost tribes of Israel. The doctrine of British-Israelism and the Lost Ten Tribes was intended to forge a political alliance between the British monarchy and the Jews of Amsterdam, through a merger of the Arthurian imperial tradition with Cabalistic interpretations of the Hebrew scriptures.

What had happened was that after the expulsion of the Jews from Spain in 1492, some of them went East to the Ottoman Empire—the Islamic world being at the time more religiously tolerant than Christendom. Within Europe itself many of the Jews moved to Italy, particularly Venice, while other Jews and marranos migrated from Spain and Portugal to Amsterdam.

The Jewish merchants and bankers of Amsterdam were seen by the British Monarchy as desirable allies in the financial and political war with Spain, as well as in the spiritual war with the Vatican. Amsterdam thus became the springboard for the return of the Jews to England, from which they had been expelled in 1290.

To forge ties between Jewish merchants and British Imperialists, John Dee created the concept of British-Israel, which gave the British and the Jews a common racial identity, and invoked biblical prophecy to show the inevitable triumph of British Imperialism: the British, as Abraham's seed, were to inherit the earth. Dee also introduced the Jewish Cabala to the British ruling class and its interlocking network of European royal dynasties. All this set the stage for the later absorption of European Jewish merchants and bankers into British society.

In essence, the dissemination of the British-Israel doctrine was an intelligence coup carried out by the British Monarchy. It wasn't the only such propaganda effort, of course. Dee also introduced Rosicrucianism to Germany, and afterward the British Monarchy continued to use secret societies for intelligence gathering and for the spread of propaganda under the guise of Cabalism and occultism.

The Literary War Continues

By the next century, the British Crown had supplanted the Vatican as the world's pre-eminent manipulator of power, having established British naval supremacy through the defeat of the Spanish Armada in 1588. But the spiritual struggle continued, and British cultural history is strewn with its remnants. Edmund Spenser, for example, wrote The Faerie Queen with the express purpose of making a Napoleonic heroine out of Queen Elisabeth I.

This happened at the same time the Jesuits on the European continent were spearheading an attempt to stamp out Napoleonic influences, which were seen as undermining the authority of the Church. The Catholics quickly counter attacked. The Catholic Marlowe wrote Faust in order to defame John Dee as a Satanic magician. Marlowe similarly penned The Jew of Malta as a propaganda work intended to generate public rage over the growing encroachment of Jewish merchants. And Marlowe's Tamburlaine was an attempt to discredit British ideals of Empire.

Francis Bacon, by contrast, carried on the traditions of John Dee (above). On the secular front, Bacon emphasized inductive science and proposed the Royal Society. On the religious side, Bacon espoused Masonry and discussed the British-Jewish alliance in his book New Atlantis. Even the Monarchy had a divided loyalty.

Queen Elisabeth's successor James I leaned again toward the Catholics. But his translation and publication of the King James Bible made possible the anti-Catholic practice of individual Bible reading and interpretation. By and large, the British Oligarchy became simultaneously humanist and occultist, pro-Jewish and anti-Catholic.

Finally, Mennaseh ben Israel, the Dutch Cabalist Rabbi, petitioned Cromwell for the return of Jews to England. Mennaseh ben Israel argued that the Messiah and the Millennium could not come until the Jews had spread to every corner of the globe, which included England. To be sure, Menasseh ben Israel was not himself a British Israelite.

Instead, he discovered the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel among American Indians, an idea that would later be revived by the Mormons. But Cromwell's Puritan advisors said he should let Jews settle in England (which Cromwell agreed to do), believing they would convert to pure biblical Christianity (which they didn't).

The Jews were actually admitted in 1664, a few years after the deaths of both Cromwell and Menasseh ben Israel. Following that event, the Catholic strain in the Monarchy was gradually weeded out. When William of Orange took over from the Catholic Stuart King James II in 1688, the domination of the Empire by the Protestant / Anglican branch of the Royal Family became permanent. The Monarchy, along with its allies the Noble and Jewish banking families, then immediately proceeded to consolidate its political control through the establishment of the Bank of England and the National Debt six years later in 1694.

These instruments provided the financial muscle needed to exercise worldwide power: to make loans and to finance enterprises, including the raising of armies and the fostering of revolutions. Manifest Destiny Yields to Balance of Power The manifest destiny of the Anglo-Saxon race continued to be important in Crown-supported propaganda.

But the Monarchy's actual policy evolved into one based on the balance of power. For example, in the 1890's, as Britain began to fear a militarist Germany, Cecil Rhodes and William Stead founded a secret society to revive support for British Imperialism. Members included Alfred (later Lord) Milner and Arthur (Lord) Balfour.

As governor-general of South Africa, Milner recruited a youthful group of administrators from Oxford and elsewhere. These were known as Milner's Kindergarten. To promote their geopolitical ideals, they established Round Table Groups in the British dependencies and the U.S. as well as think tanks like the Royal Institute of International Affairs and the Council on Foreign Relations. The stated intention of the society was to spread British upper class ideals to the world's masses. In practice, however, the Round Table Groups were principally used as an outlet for anti-German propaganda.

In his case—to counter the growing power of Germany—appeal was made to Britain's former colony in the New World: namely, to America. It was the Round Table connections of "Colonel" E. M. House, the principal advisor to President Wilson, that led in 1913 to the establishment of the Federal Reserve and the graduated Income Tax in the U.S.

You needed both of these, of course, to provide the financial basis to create an American war machine. World War I broke out the following year. But prior to the outbreak, House wrote to Wilson: "Whenever England consents, France and Russia will close in on Germany and Austria." As another example of the balance of power policy, the Balfour Declaration in 1917—of British support for a Jewish homeland in Palestine—served the immediate purpose of increasing Jewish support for the British war effort. But it also followed Crown policy in eventually creating a balance of power in the Middle East.

It is easy to see what was going on if you look at the history of The Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion. The first edition was published in Russian in 1901. Afterward it was translated into English by George Shanks and issued through the Eyre and Spottiswoode Publishing House, the printer of all official releases by the British Royal Family. Coming from such a prestigious printer, the book quickly sold 30,000 copies before being withdrawn under pressure from the Rothschilds. But a few years later Henry H. Beamish founded "The Britons," a "Society to protect the Birthright of Britons, and to eradicate Alien influence from our politics and industries."

The Britons proceeded to distribute The Protocols worldwide. In short—the battle with the Vatican long since won—the Monarchy kept the Jews on a short leash, through a carrot and stick policy.

Assimilation into society and support for a homeland was the carrot, while The Protocols was the stick. The Magician is the author of the on-going Laissez Faire City Times serialized novel, Jack Parsons and the Curious origins of the American Space Program, for which he has promised to send more episodes when he returns from his journey to Kashmir.

Parliamentary Government Letter to Cressida Dick

Dear Cressida__, We have in this Kingdom, laws to protect animals. This particularly includes the requirement to stun animals bred for the food chain. It was a mistake to allow kosher slaughter just to placate the Jewish minority.

We have a number of MP's who are opposed to halal slaughter. I understand these MP's have been advised by police not to vote against halal slaughter as their lives may be at risk.

You should be aware that to attempt to alter the freedom of MP's to vote as their conscience dictates, by threats or attempts of violence is the crime at common law of sedition.

We pay a police service to uphold the law as it is written. We do not pay and employ a police service to give in to law breakers. Particularly when it threatens those we elect to act on our behalf and in our defence, those who have the lawful freedom to vote in the Palace of Westminster as their conscience dictates.

I fully understand the logistical problems this will cause to the nation's police service. But if the lives of MP's are threatened if they do not vote according to the dictate of minority groups, then this is a very serious matter that our paid police service are hired to sort out and prosecute where appropriate.

This issue above, is entirely opposed to the will of the vast majority of Her Majesty's indigenous subjects. By recommending that MP's vote through the application of threats means the police service are complicit in the major crime of sedition.

MP's must be given 24 hour protection preferably by armed officers. I fully understand you do not have sufficient officers to do this. So I would recommend that military police from all three Services should be called upon to assist.

Political correctness and pandering to minority groups whose opinions are largely rejected out of hand by Her Majesty's indigenous subjects, can only end up with our once proud, diligent and upstanding police abandoning the streets and a blood bath when Her Majesty's indigenous subjects fight back. Yours truly, Albert Burgess, Oxfordshire, UK.

Smart Meters - Just Joining the Dots

I happened upon a serious and intentional 'fault' in our electricity supply. For reasons I shall not go into, I installed a voltage optimiser between the meter and the distribution board, this cured the problem, however, the optimiser was set to regulate the voltage to between 230 volts and minus 6% being the lower legal limit.

We did a parallel recording before and after the optimiser, the readings on the grid input showed voltages of 242 average with the voltage after the optimiser of 224 average and never higher than 234. Electricity is sold in KWs and KWs are volts x amps so increase the voltage on the transformers and hey presto you get charged more.

We know that the mains frequently exceed 263 volts which is well outside the Legal limit of 253. Such voltages are detrimental to all electrical equipment especially TVs, washing machines, refrigerators, microwaves and other digital devices upon which we rely in this day and age.

Another effect of over voltage is to shorten the life of the new 'long lasting' light bulbs. Yours truly, Paul "Semper veritas"

kaf-bet-waw-dalet, honour, respect

Sounds good doesn't it. However, have you ever watched the 'brave' Israelis go after Palestinian children (unarmed)? I have buddies who were stationed over there with these 'brave' Zionist warriors and what they saw disgusted them. Wake up!

And, what the hell is their 'Yiddish' doing on our cars anyway!? Or, is it possible these cars are made to look like ours when in fact they belong to the Israeli Mossad or IDF? Yours truly, Daniel Johns, USA

Freedom

Sir, __ Just a friendly reminder, we had more freedoms under Great Britain prior to 1776 than we do right now.

125 Years Ago You Didn't Have to Ask Permission from the Government to:-

Collect rain water. Go fishing. Own a property. Start a business. Renovate your home. Build a home. Use a transportation vehicle. Get married. Hunt. Own a weapon. Cut hair. Sell a product. Protest. Crow food on your property. Set up a lemonade stand. Sell food.

You can do virtually nothing without being extorted by government and obtaining their permission first. If you still think you're free, you're deluding yourself* You live in a tax farm as free range humana. Yours truly, Daniel Johns, USA

Vaccination Failure

Sir __, I came across this interesting quote:-

"The developer of the polio vaccine himself, Dr. Albert Sabin, told a Senate subcommittee, " Official data shows that large scale vaccination has failed to obtain any significant improvement of the diseases against which they were supposed to provide protection." Yours truly KH, West Midlands, UK.

Response to "PUB" Article in Last Month's New Ensign

Sir __, I feel that I must respond to the article giving notices to care home directors.

Briefly it is very dangerous advice which will lead to care home workers believing that PUB will get them back to work when they should be considering class actions against the government. Effectively PUB are assisting the evil government.

I have no criticism of the notices. My criticism is that PUB intends to use the process of commercial liens to force directors of care homes to take back their staff. No doubt the care home directors will take legal advice which will be to just ignore the commercial liens.

This is the correct advice because they cannot be enforced in British courts because the British courts are corrupt. They will state that the universal commercial code has not been adopted by the UK. I have served two commercial liens to try the process. Using legal language which I interpret as “* off” explains exactly how they respond, if indeed they bother to respond.

I have a man living in a cabin on my property who was sucked in by people similar to the PUB organisation. He has lost his home and spent about £1000 serving commercial liens. He truly believed that he was going to receive millions in damages.

PUB could help these people by supporting them in a criminal prosecution against selected directors. They obviously have sufficient command of the law to mount such a prosecution. The fact that they choose to go down the commercial lien route makes me highly suspicious of their motives.

There are people who hold common law courts which ARE according to UK law but they cannot enforce their decisions. David Noakes, the cancer cure specialist, found out the hard way when he tried using the Common Law Court's decision that the extradition to France was unlawful.

The Southwark Crown Court dismissed the Common law Court decision by stating that the administrative courts do not recognise Common Law Court decisions. David Noakes and his partner Lynda Thyer are held in France. David has been in prison for over a year.

What you do with this information is for you to decide. Yours truly John T. Gloucestershire, UK.

Comment on Articles By Adam De Witt

Sir—, Having just read the October edition of ‘New Ensign’ and following, with great interest the articles by Adam de Witt, I’m not sure about his view that we should not elect (create) Presidents, Prime Ministers or kings as he believes that they are being used to take the place of God. He quotes the insistence of the Israelites to want a king to rule over them leading up to Saul being made a king over them rather than relying on God.

We need earthly rulers to administer justice and to make sure that we obey God's laws and commandments. If this were not the case why would Paul have said in Romans 13:1-7

1) Let every person be subject to the governing authorities. For there is no authority except from God, and those that exist have been instituted by God.

2) Therefore whoever resists the authorities resists what God has appointed, and those who resist will incur judgment.

3) For rulers are not a terror to good conduct, but to bad. Would you have no fear of the one who is in authority? Then do what is good, and you will receive his approval,

4) for he is God's servant for your good. But if you do wrong, be afraid, for he does not bear the sword in vain. For he is the servant of God, an avenger who carries out God's wrath on the wrongdoer.

5) Therefore one must be in subjection, not only to avoid God's wrath but also for the sake of conscience.

6) For because of this you also pay taxes, for the authorities are ministers of God, attending to this very thing.

7) Pay to all what is owed to them: taxes to whom taxes are owed, revenue to whom revenue is owed, respect to whom respect is owed, honour to whom honour is owed.

I think that Adam de Witt is right in one aspect in that since the days of Saul, except for a few Godly Israelite Kings, rulers have been corrupt and evil. Although, in the words of Paul, we are expected to pay taxes etc, and respect those in authority over us, what has happened over the millennia since Saul, taxes have been used as a means to steal our money to fund politicians and their pet projects.

Punishment for crime has almost disappeared and that it is often the victim that is punished. There has been no attempt to rule according to God's laws and commandments hence we have rampant sexual immorality, the murder of unborn children, sexual perversion of the worst kind, the violation of constitutions most of which were based on God's laws.

When Jesus returns we (God's children) will rule with Him over the rest of the world and it will be a much better place. Yours truly, Jack Lewis, UK.

The End

The Earth's Electric Envelope Arthur Firstenberg

All things by immortal power,
Near or far,
Hiddenly
To each other linked are,
That thou canst not stir a flower
Without troubling of a star

Francis Thompson, in The Mistress of Vision

A

WHEN I LOOK at a flower, what I see is not the same as what a honey bee sees, who comes to drink its nectar. She sees beautiful patterns of ultraviolet that are invisible to me, and she is blind to the colour red. A red poppy is ultraviolet to her. A cinquefoil flower, which looks pure yellow to me, is to her purple, with a yellow centre luring her to its nectar. Most white flowers are blue-green to her eye.

When I look upon the night sky, the stars appear as points of colour twinkling through earth's atmosphere. Everywhere else, except for the moon and a few planets, is blackness. But it is the blackness of illusion.

If you could see all the colours in the world, including the ultraviolet that honeybees can see, the infrareds that snakes can see, the low electric frequencies that catfish and salamanders can see, the radio waves, the X-rays, the gamma rays, the slow galactic pulsations, if you could see everything that is really there in its myriad shapes and hues, in all of its blinding glory, instead of blackness you'd see form and motion everywhere, day and night.

Almost all of the matter in the universe is electrically charged, an endless sea of ionised particles called plasma, named after the contents of living cells because of the unpredictable, life-like behaviour of electrified matter.

The stars we see are made of electrons, protons, bare atomic nuclei, and other charged particles in constant motion. The space between the stars and galaxies, far from being empty, teems with electrically charged subatomic particles, swimming in vast swirling electromagnetic fields, accelerated by those fields to near-light speeds.

Plasma is such a good conductor of electricity, far better than any metals, that filaments of plasma—invisible wires billions of light-years long—transport electromagnetic energy in gigantic circuits from one part of the universe to another, shaping the heavens. Under the influence of electromagnetic forces, over billions of years, cosmic whirlpools of matter collect along these filaments, like beads on a string, evolving into the galaxies that decorate our night sky.

In addition, thin sheaths of electric current called double layers, like the membranes of biological cells, divide intergalactic space into immense compartments, each of which can have different physical, chemical, electrical, and magnetic properties. There may even, some speculate, be matter on one side of a double layer and antimatter on the other. Enormous electric fields prevent the different regions of space from mixing, just as the integrity of our own cells is preserved by the electric fields of the membranes surrounding them.

Our own Milky Way, in which we live, a medium-sized spiral galaxy one hundred thousand light-years across, rotates around its centre once every two hundred and fifty million earth years, generating around itself a galactic-size magnetic field. Filaments of plasma five hundred light-years long, generating additional magnetic fields, have been photographed looping out of our galactic centre.

Our sun, also made of plasma, sends out an ocean of electrons, protons, and helium ions in a steady current called the solar wind. Blowing at three hundred miles per second, it bathes the earth and all of the planets before diffusing out into the plasma between the stars.

The earth, with its core of iron, rotates on its axis in the electric fields of the solar system and the galaxy, and as it rotates it generates its own magnetic field that traps and deflects the charged particles of the solar wind. They wrap the earth in an envelope of plasma called the magnetosphere, which stretches out on the night side of the planet into a comet-like tail hundreds of millions of miles long.

Some of the particles from the solar wind collect in layers we call the Van Allen belts, where they circulate six hundred to thirty-five thousand miles above our heads. Driven along magnetic lines of force toward the poles, the electrons collide with oxygen and nitrogen atoms in the upper atmosphere.

These fluoresce to produce the northern and southern lights, the aurorae borealis and australis, that dance in the long winter nights of the high latitudes.

The sun also bombards our planet with ultraviolet light and X-rays. These strike the air fifty to two hundred and fifty miles above us, ionising it, freeing the electrons that carry electric currents in the upper atmosphere. This, the earth's own layer of plasma, is called the ionosphere.

The earth is also showered with charged particles from all directions called cosmic rays. These are atomic nuclei and subatomic particles that travel at velocities approaching the speed of light.

From within the earth comes radiation emitted by uranium and other radioactive elements. Cosmic rays from space and radiation from the rocks and soil provide the small ions that carry the electric currents that surround us in the lower atmosphere.

In this electromagnetic environment we evolved. We all live in a fairly constant vertical electric field averaging 130 volts per meter. In fair weather, the ground beneath us has a negative charge, the ionosphere above us has a positive charge, and the potential difference between ground and sky is about 300,000 volts.

The most spectacular reminder that electricity is always playing around and through us, bringing messages from the sun and stars, is, of course, lightning. Electricity courses through the sky far above us, explodes downward in thunderstorms, rushes through the ground beneath us, and flows gently back up through the air in fair weather, carried by small ions.

All of this happens continuously, as electricity animates the entire earth; about one hundred bolts of lightning, each delivering a trillion watts of energy, strike the earth every second. During thunderstorms the electric tension in the air around us can reach 4,000 volts per meter and more.

When I first learned about the global electrical circuit, twenty-five years ago, I drew the following sketch to help me think about it.

The above drawing indicates, plants are part of the global circuit

Living organisms, as the drawing indicates, are part of the global circuit. Each of us generates our own electric fields, which keep us vertically polarized like the atmosphere, with our feet and hands negative with respect to our spine and head. Our negative feet walk on the negative ground, as our positive heads point to the positive sky.

The complex electric circuits that course gently through our bodies are completed by ground and sky, and in this very real way the earth and sun, the Great Yin and the Great Yang of the Yellow Emperor's Classic, are energy sources for life.

It is not widely appreciated that the reverse is also true: not only does life need the earth, but the earth needs life. The atmosphere, for example, exists only because green things have been growing for billions of years. Plants created the oxygen, all of it, and very likely the nitrogen too. Yet we fail to treat our fragile cushion of air as the irreplaceable treasure that it is, more precious than the rarest diamond.

Because for every atom of coal or oil that we burn, for every molecule of carbon dioxide that we produce from them, we destroy forever one molecule of oxygen. The burning of fossil fuels, of ancient plants that once breathed life into the future, is really the undoing of creation.

Electrically, too, life is essential. Living trees rise hundreds of feet into the air from the negatively charged ground. And because most raindrops, except in thunderstorms, carry positive charge down to earth, trees attract rain out of the clouds, and the felling of trees contributes electrically towards a loss of rainfall where forests used to stand.

"As for men," said Loren Eiseley, "those myriad little detached ponds with their own swarming corpuscular life, what were they but a way that water has of going about beyond the reach of rivers?"¹ Not only we, but especially trees, are the earth's way of watering the desert. Trees increase evaporation and lower temperatures, and the currents of life speeding through their sap are continuous with the sky and the rain.

We are all part of a living earth, as the earth is a member of a living solar system and a living universe. The play of electricity across the galaxy, the magnetic rhythms of the planets, the eleven-year cycle of sunspots, the fluctuations in the solar wind, thunder and lightning upon this earth, biological currents within our bodies—the one depends upon all the others.

We are like tiny cells in the body of the universe. Events on the other side of the galaxy affect all life here on earth. And it is perhaps not too far-fetched to say that any dramatic change in life on earth will have a small but noticeable effect on the sun and stars.

When the City and South London Electric Railway (Above) began operating in 1890, it interfered with delicate instruments at the Royal Observatory at Greenwich four and a half miles away.

Little did the physicists there know that electromagnetic waves from that and every other electric railway were also radiating into space and altering the earth's magnetosphere, a fact that would not be discovered until decades later. To understand its significance for life, let us return first to the story of lightning.

The house we live in, which is the biosphere, the roughly 55-mile-high space filled with air that wraps around the earth, is a resonant cavity that rings like a gong every time a lightning bolt strikes. In addition to maintaining the static electric field of 130 volts per meter in which we all stand and walk, and in which birds fly, lightning sets the biosphere ringing at particular low frequency tones— 8 beats per second (or Hz), 14, 20, 26, 32, and so forth.

These tones are named for Winfried Schumann, the German physicist who predicted their existence, and who, with his student Herbert König, proved their constant presence in the atmosphere in 1953.

It so happens that in a state of awake relaxation, our brains tune in to these precise frequencies. The dominant pattern of a human electroencephalogram, from before birth through adulthood—the well-known alpha rhythm, ranging from 8 to 13 Hz, or 7 to 13 Hz in a newborn—is bounded by the first two Schumann resonances. An old part of the brain called the limbic system, which is involved in emotions, and in long-term memory, produces theta waves, of 4 to 7. Hz, which are bounded above by the first Schumann resonance.

The theta rhythm is more prominent in young children, and in adults in meditation. These same frequencies, alpha and theta, with surprisingly little variation, pulsate, so far as is known, in all animals. In a state of relaxation, dogs show an alpha rhythm, identical to ours, of 8 to 12 Hz. In cats the range is slightly wider, from 8. to 15 Hz. Rabbits, guinea pigs, goats and cows, frogs, birds, and reptiles all show nearly the same frequencies.

Schumann's student König was so impressed by the resemblances these atmospheric waves bear to the electrical oscillations of the brain that he conducted a series of experiments with far reaching implications.

The first Schumann resonance, he wrote, is so completely identical to the alpha rhythm that even an expert is hard pressed to tell the difference between the tracings from the brain and the atmosphere.

König did not think this was a coincidence. The first Schumann resonance appears during fair weather, he noted, in calm, balanced conditions, just as the alpha rhythm appears in the brain in a calm, relaxed state. The delta rhythm, on the other hand, which consists of irregular, higher amplitude waves around 3 Hz, appears in the atmosphere under disturbed, unbalanced weather conditions, and in the brain in disturbed or disease states— headaches, spastic conditions, tumours, and so forth.

In an experiment involving nearly fifty thousand people attending a Traffic Exhibition in Munich in 1953, König was able to prove that these latter types of disturbed waves, when present in the atmosphere, significantly slow human reactions times, while the 8 Hz Schumann waves do just the opposite.

The larger the Schumann signal in the atmosphere, the quicker people's reactions were on that day. König then duplicated these effects in the laboratory: an artificial field of 3 Hz (delta range) slowed human reactions, while an artificial field of 10 Hz (alpha range) accelerated them. König also noted that during the 3 Hz exposure some of his subjects complained of headaches, fatigue, tightness in their chest, or sweating from their palms.

In 1965, James R. Hamer published the results of experiments along these same lines that he had conducted for Northrop Space Laboratories, in an article which he titled “Biological Entrainment of the Human Brain by Low Frequency Radiation.”

Like König, he showed that frequencies above 8 Hz quickened reaction times, while lower frequencies had the opposite effect. But he went further. He proved that the human brain could distinguish between frequencies that differed only slightly from each other—but only if the signal was weak enough. When he reduced the signal strength to 0.0038 volts per meter, which is close to the value of the earth's own fields, 7 Vi Hz had a significantly different effect than 8 V2 Hz, and 9Vi Hz than 10 V2 Hz.

Lightning is not yet done with its repertoire. In addition to the static field that we walk in and the low frequencies that speak to our brains, lightning also provides us with a steady symphony of higher frequencies called atmospheric, or just “sf erics,” which reach thousands of cycles per second. They sound like twigs snapping if you listen to them on a very low frequency (VLF) radio, and usually originate in thunderstorms that may, however, be thousands of miles away.

Other sounds, called whistlers, resembling the descending tones of a slide whistle, often originate in thunderstorms on the opposite end of the earth. Their falling tones are produced during the long journey these waves have taken as they are guided along magnetic field lines into outer space and back to earth in the opposite hemisphere.

These waves may even bounce back and forth many times from one end of the earth to another, resulting in trains of whistles that seemed so unworldly when they were first discovered in the 1920s that they generated newspaper articles with not-so-inappropriate titles like “Voices From Outer Space.”

Among the other sounds one may hear, especially at higher latitudes, originating somewhere in the electrical environment of our planet, are a steady hiss, and a “dawn chorus,” so named because of its resemblance to chirping birds. Both of these sounds rise and fall gently every 10 seconds or so with the slow pulsations of the earth’s magnetic field.

This VLF symphony bathes our nervous system. Its frequencies, ranging roughly from 200 to 30,000 Hz, span the range of our auditory system and also, as König observed, include the frequencies of the impulses that our brains send to our muscles.

The effect our VLF environment has on our well-being was resoundingly demonstrated by Reinhold Reiter in 1954 when he tabulated the results of a number of population studies that he and his colleagues had conducted in Germany, involving about one million people. Births, deaths, suicides, rapes, work injuries, traffic accidents, human reaction times, amputees’ pains, and complaints of people with brain injuries all rose significantly on days with strong VLF sferics.

Our VLF environment regulates biological rhythms in both humans and animals. Golden hamsters, which have been popular pets since the 1930’s, live in the wild near Aleppo, Syria where, every winter for about three months, they go in and out of hibernation.

But scientists who have tried to use hamsters as a subject for hibernation studies in the laboratory have been puzzled by their inability to trigger hibernation in these animals by exposing them to prolonged cold, reducing hours of daylight, or controlling any other known environmental Factor.

In the mid-1960’s, climatologists Wolfgang Ludwig and Reinhard Mecke took a different approach. They kept a hamster during the winter in a Faraday cage, shielded from all natural electro-magnetic waves, and without any alteration of temperature or hours of daylight.

At the beginning of the fourth week they introduced the natural outdoor atmospheric frequencies by means of an antenna, whereupon the hamster promptly fell asleep.

During the following two months, the researchers were able to put the animal into and out of hibernation by introducing, or removing, either the natural outdoor frequencies, or artificial VLF fields that imitated the natural winter pattern.

Then, at the beginning of the thirteenth week of the experiment, the frequencies in the enclosure were changed so as to imitate the natural summer pattern, and within half an hour, as if panicked by the sudden change in season, the animal woke up and began a “movement storm,” running day and night for an entire week until the experiment was terminated.

In repetitions of this experiment on other hamsters, the researchers found that this high level of activity could not be induced unless the state of hibernation had been triggered first. The artificial fields they used were extremely weak as small as 10 millivolts per meter for the electric field and 26.5 micro amperes per meter for the magnetic field.

Obituary Duncan MacRae Henderson Known to Readers of This Magazine as “An Ancient Mariner”

St Andrew's Church Scarborough

NEWSPAPER HAS JUST BEEN RECEIVED OF THE PASSING OF DUNCAN MACRAE HENDERSON, on 21 October, 2021, in Scarborough, after a short illness.

Duncan was a regular contributor to this magazine, under the pen name of “An Ancient Mariner”, and continued to contribute to this magazine until quite recently in “Letters and Views” when finally prevented by deteriorating sight.

Our heartfelt condolences and sympathies to his family and friends at this sad and difficult time.

A subscriber to this magazine did attend Duncan’s funeral at St. Andrew's Church, Scarborough, on Tuesday, 9th, November, 2021. His burial took place in the family plot the following day at another location, attended by family members and close friends only.

Duncan was a regular attender of BI meetings and went for many years to their annual conferences at Swanwick in Derbyshire where in the evening get together's after the meetings he kept all entertained with yarns of his working career as a senior officer on the Cunard Shipping Line, such as bad decisions of management and how with his crews help the best was made of a difficult situation.

His tales of interesting people he met in many different countries were legion. From these stories it would seem there was hardly a port in the world that he had not entered during his Merchant Navy career. Like the proverbial sailor that had a girl in every port, Duncan had an interesting person in every port!

He confided that as an officer after he had assigned the crew their various duties, he told them should they have a problem, not to be frightened to knock on his cabin door—as he would not be asleep. With his well-run ship there were few knocks on his cabin door enabling him to read hundreds of books, hence his great knowledge --- A far better education than going to university!!

One tale Duncan frequently related, was a tour of St. Petersburg he did with some of his crew, when the Intourist Guide remarked on an item in “Pravada”, one of the bus passengers chimed up, saying “Pravada” was a pure Soviet propaganda sheet. The Intourist guide wryly smiled back and said, don't you know the Western press is exactly the same?

Duncan was a member of Orange Street Congregational Church in central London. After the services, Duncan and his fellow mariner friend, Ricky Gair, provided tea, biscuits and cakes, for the after meetings fellowships for which the church became renowned.

Duncan used to live near the Tower of London but later moved to Scarborough, to be nearer his family. However he remained in contact with his friends down south via the telephone.

Duncan, before his sight began to deteriorate, was a great writer and was a regular contributor to this magazine by way of letters and articles under the pen name "The Ancient Mariner". His articles and comments were always well received.

He was also a great writer of letters to the Queen and officials in Government and Church, pointing out the error of their ways.

Later as his sight got worse, he was a regular member of the New Ensign Skype group chinwag on Wednesday and Sunday evenings, which he appreciated as it was a means of fellowship, as he became more housebound.

Our heartfelt condolences to all his family and friends. He will be greatly missed, but when he reaches the other side, I am sure he will be greeted with – WELL DONE My Good and Faithful Servant!

A Short History of The English People - An Interesting Extract – The Transfer of Sovereignty From The Monarch to The House of Commons From Our Irish Correspondent sovereignty from the King to the House Commons.

From the moment when its sole right to tax the nation was established by the Bill of Rights, and when its own resolve settled the practice of granting none but annual supplies to the Crown, the House of Commons became the supreme power in the State.

It was impossible permanently to suspend its sittings, or, in the long run, to oppose its will, when either course must end in leaving the Government penniless, in breaking up the army and navy, and in rendering the public service impossible. But though the constitutional change was complete, the machinery of government was far from having adapted itself to the new conditions of political life which such a change brought about.

IT SEEMS, THE REVOLUTION OF 1688 had only transferred the sovereignty over England from James to William and Mary. In actual fact, it was transferring the

However powerful the will of the House of Commons might be, it had no means of bringing its will directly to bear upon the conduct of public affairs. The Ministers who had charge of them were not its servants, but the servants of the Crown; it was from the King that they looked for direction, and to the King that they held themselves responsible.

By impeachment or more indirect means the Commons could force a King to remove a Minister who contradicted their will; but they had no constitutional power to replace the fallen statesman by a Minister who would carry out their will.

The result was the growth of a temper in the Lower House which drove William and his Ministers to despair. It became as corrupt, as jealous of power, as fickle in its resolves, as factious in spirit, as bodies always become whose consciousness of the possession of power is untempered by a corresponding consciousness of the practical difficulties or the moral responsibilities of the power which they possess.

It grumbled at the ill-success of the war, at the suffering of the merchants, at the discontent of the Churchmen; and it blamed the Crown and its Ministers for all at which it grumbled. But it was hard to find out what policy or measures it would have preferred. Its mood changed, as William bitterly complained, with every hour.

It was, in fact, without the guidance of recognized leaders, without adequate information, and destitute of that organization out of which alone a definite policy can come.

Nothing better proves the inborn political capacity of the English mind than that it should at once have found a simple and effective solution of such a difficulty as this.

The credit of the solution belongs to a man whose political character was of the lowest type. Robert, Earl of Sunderland (centre), had been a Minister in the later days of Charles the Second; and he had remained Minister through almost all the reign of James.

He had held office at last only by compliance with the worst tyranny of his master, and by a feigned conversion to the Roman Catholic faith. But the ruin of James was no sooner certain than he had secured pardon and protection from William by the betrayal of the master to whom he had sacrificed his conscience and his honour.

Since the Revolution, Sunderland had striven only to escape public observation in a country retirement, but at this crisis he came secretly forward to bring his unequalled sagacity to the aid of the King.

His counsel was to recognize practically the new power of the Commons by choosing the Ministers of the Crown exclusively from among the members of the party which was strongest in the Lower House. As yet no Ministry, in the modern sense of the term, had existed.

Each great officer of state, Treasurer, or Secretary, or Lord Privy Seal, had in theory been independent of his fellow-officers; each was the "King's servant" and responsible for the discharge of his special duties to the King alone.

From time to time one Minister, like Clarendon, might tower above the rest and give a general direction to the whole course of government, but the predominance was merely personal and never permanent; and even in such a case there were colleagues who were ready to oppose or even impeach the statesman who overshadowed them.

It was common for a King to choose or dismiss a single Minister without any communication with the rest; and so far from aiming at ministerial unity, even William had striven to reproduce in the Cabinet itself the balance of parties which prevailed outside it.

Sunderland's plan aimed at replacing these independent Ministers by a homogeneous Ministry, chosen from the same party, representing the same sentiments, and bound together for common action by a sense of responsibility and loyalty to the party to which it belonged. Not only would such a plan secure a unity of administration which had been unknown till then, but it gave an organization to the House of Commons which it had never had before. The Ministers who were representatives of the majority of its members became the natural leaders of the House.

Small factions were drawn together into the two great parties which supported or opposed the Ministry of the Crown. Above all it brought about in the simplest possible way the solution of the problem which had so long vexed both King and Commons.

The new Ministers ceased in all but name to be the King's servants. They became simply an Executive Committee representing the will of the majority of the House of Commons, and capable of being easily set aside by it and replaced by a similar Committee whenever the balance of power shifted from one side of the House to the other.

Internal Revenue Service (Part 2)

By Willie Martin

Can you imagine the government of the US limiting a church as to its duties in regarding charitable activity? There is no subject in the Bible that is nearer to the heart of God than charity. According to the apostle James, it is the test of pure religion (James 1:27). Paul the Apostle declares that charity is of higher value even than preaching and sacrifice (I Cor. 13:1-3). For the churches to debase such a high and noble service to Christ by submitting its administration to the wicked IRS is beyond belief.

How will the preachers of America give an account of caving into this coercion by an abusive Bush administration who is continuing with the policies of those before him? How will church leaders face the Lord Jesus at the Judgment Seat of Christ when He asks them why they violated His clear commands concerning alms giving?

He said, "Take heed that ye do not your alms before men, to be seen of them: otherwise ye have no reward of your Father which is in heaven. Therefore when thou doest thine alms, do not sound a trumpet before thee, as the hypocrites do in the synagogues and in the streets, that they may have glory of men, Verily

I say unto you, They have their reward. But when thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth: That thine alms may be in secret: and thy Father which seeth in secret himself shall reward thee openly."

But now the churches are required to get the permission of the IRS before helping someone other than in the manner and purpose that they approve. Then records will have to be kept for the IRS so that the publicans can make sure that the church is in fact following their guidelines.

And, of course, they expect church leaders to report this alms giving to the IRS so that they can even gouge the poor for more tribute. And all of this so the churches can keep their tax exemption and the people can get their precious tax deductions for their tithes and gifts. As James Dobson's (above) organization said when challenged, "It's just good stewardship." Thievery, good stewardship? How sad.

It may be that the churches have now gone too far. When they begin building their dynasties on the backs of the poor our Lord, no doubt, will be swift in His removal of their candlestick. He said to the church at Ephesus, "Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do the first works: or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent." (Revelation 2:5)

All Churches Now Required to Join IRS Super Church

Two other developments concerning IRS control of churches has risen recently that should literally send shock waves through the religious community. First, while the churches are arguing doctrinal positions among themselves, and won't even spit on each other for the most part, the IRS has now developed its own super church. Independent Baptists in particular pride themselves in their anti-ecumenism.

No fundamentalist preacher worth his salt would be caught dead at the local church federation meeting where he has to rub shoulders with a charismatic or liberal preacher. However, they don't think twice about paying a large fee to go to a Chitwood or CLA seminar and sit next to one of these religious outcasts to learn how to be a good IRS approved church and pastor.

It is now a fact that in order to get and keep the tax- exempt status a church must agree that all religions are equal. The new Application for Recognition of Exemption Form 1023 Schedule A for Churches (Rev. September 1998) demands a declaration to this effect with the following words at point #3: "Does the organization require prospective members to renounce other religious beliefs or their membership in other churches or religious orders to become members?"

Yes__ No. If "Yes," describe." It doesn't take much intelligence to figure out where they are going with this. In order to be considered a legal church (tax exempt) in America, the church or religious organization will have to declare that all religions are equal. They will also have to declare that they do not believe that their doctrinal position only results in converts to their faith having eternal life.

They must renounce this narrow inclusivist position. Maybe we now know why Billy Graham, Robert Schuller, Pat Robertson, and other TV preachers have been making such fuzzy remarks about adherents of other religions, though sincere, going to heaven without receiving Christ.

In that tax exemption is government subsidy, according to the Supreme Court in the Bob Jones University case, it is now clear that the US government will not support any religion that clings to the narrow minded belief that salvation is in Jesus Christ alone.

Remember? "Come Shekels, Come Shackles." The world church isn't coming; it is already here, and the preachers don't have a clue as they go merrily along hand in hand with the Great Harlot to the wedding with the anti-Christ. (Revelation 17).

US Government Through the IRS Outlaws Preaching on Second Coming of Christ

Texe Marrs

July 15, 1944 – November 23, 2019

One of the reasons the IRS gave to Texe Marr's Living Truth Ministries for removing their tax exempt status is as follows: "Much of the material you disseminate promises to address possible conspiracies or threats, either from individuals, groups or various agencies, against Christianity, freedom or other rights. This is evident from a review of your newsletters and order forms. The titles and promotional materials are designed to sensationalize and grab the readers attention.

They usually imply that the works will expose certain prominent groups, individuals, politicians or government agencies as being part of or linked to some threat or conspiracy."One of the titles that the IRS gave as an example included "Bible Prophecy and The Conspiracy."

Any grade school child in Sunday School knows that you can't teach or write on Bible prophecy without dealing with the second coming of Jesus Christ. But just as the Russian pastors under communism were forbidden to speak on this subject, we are now coming to the same place in our beloved land.

It is obvious that if one believes in the literal return of the Lord Jesus Christ that they will be considered a domestic terrorist. In that the Lord Jesus will destroy wicked government upon His return in great glory and break the back of Gentile world rule, this message isn't popular with the in-for-hells and the high-heeled-belles that run our country today.

Of course, they don't believe that He is coming, but they believe that we who do will be involved in what they call self-fulfilled prophecies and try to hasten His coming by blowing up everything in sight. Further evidence of this type of anti-Christ thinking surfaced recently when a brochure put out by the FBI in Phoenix, Arizona, named "potential domestic terrorists" that law enforcement should be aware of. One of those groups is "Doomsday/Cult-Type."

Obviously, this would include all Bible believing preachers and churches in America. We not only believe that there will be a literal doomsday, we believe that the Lord Jesus Christ will bring the doom when He comes (Revelation 6:12-17). It won't do any good to claim that your church is not a "cult". The IRS definition fits the average Bible believing church to a tee.

Many have asked if we can actually show them this in the law. Our answer is no, we can't because you won't find a specific law that says that you can't preach on the Second Coming of Jesus Christ in America today. That's because they don't have to write a law to gain the same effect. All Congress has to do is to give an outlaw agency like the IRS a carte blanche privilege of making up their own so-called laws as they go along.

The churches agreed to this when they signed their tax- exempt contract. They said that they would obey all laws, federal, state and local, presently and in the future. But they apparently didn't read the fine print.

The new churches filing for tax exemption must agree to the following: "The Corporation or organization shall have no power to take any action that would be required for a tax exemption under Internal Revenue Code Section 501(c)(3) and related regulations, rulings, and procedures." It is now the "procedure" of the IRS to refuse tax exempt status to those churches that will not agree that all religions are equal and who refuse to join through tax exemption, the world church. Also, preaching on Christ's coming is taboo.

For those churches which are foolish enough to believe that Sec. 508 of the IRS code allows an automatic exemption for churches, need to read it again. It doesn't say "exemption," it says, "...churches have a mandatory exception." The exception is from filing a Form 1023 to make application for not for profit status. Here is the kicker. Churches have to abide by the same rules that those that do file for this privilege. And if they do not, the IRS can, and most assuredly will, remove their tax exemption. The only thing missing is the annual Form 990 that other religious organizations have to file. When this is required, the churches will be under total control of the IRS with no wiggle room.

In the Baptist Temple court case, the church learned that a New Testament Church does not legally exist in the US today because there are no longer any First Amendment protections left. The genius of the First Amendment and various religious freedom clauses of the fifty states is that, for the first time in history, a N. T. Church could exist legally without having in the words of the IRS a "distinct legal existence."

Now even a N.T. Church will be assigned by force the legal status of an association and will be expected to meet the same standards that the not for profits have to meet. But, they still won't have their God given right of a non-taxable status. This status is in contrast to an exempt status which is a privilege not a right.

IRS Agent Says That Churches Are Trapped

The evidence as to what we are saying, though denied by most preachers, was made clear on January 24 this year in Tampa, Florida. IRS agent Melvin Blough testified in federal court that "once a church obtains the status of 501(c)(3) under the IRC they are trapped. The only way to be removed from a 501(c)(3) status is if the IRS chooses to remove the exemption. So if you dissolve the corporation and continue on as ABC church, an unincorporated church, you're still trapped in their web and under their control." He further testified that a church is automatically exempt under federal law without a 501(c)(3) designation.

He also stated under oath that churches request the status just to get the governments stamp of approval. Even though Blough used the word "exemption" rather than "exception," he is essentially correct in his assessment of the plight of the churches of America. It is obvious that, regardless, the result is the same.

Thanks to: boro@computer.net for this information Pastor Greg Dixon, drafted a document called "Thirty Ways The IRS Tries to Control the Preachers and Churches in America." He also did a video of the same title. The below (including the attachment) is an edited version of Pastor Dixon's document. I am sending it to you FYI, so you can understand what the 501(c)3 churches are being subjected to by the government. Pastor Dixon's church was a 501(c)3 church.—and then, he recognized the error in that and rejected his IRS status.

These are the reasons he rejected it. In turn, the IRS has gone after him for taxes - taxes, which according to the let Amendment of the Bill of Rights, no church owes to the government.

And the merchants of the earth shall weep and mourn over her; for no man buyeth their merchandise any more. —The merchants of these things, which were made rich by her, shall stand afar off for the fear of her torment— And every shipmaster, and all the company in ships, and sailors, and as many as trade by sea— cried when they saw the smoke of her burning— for thy merchants were the great men of the earth— And in her was found the blood of prophets, and of saints, and of all that were slain upon the earth. ” Rev 18:1- 2,11,15,17- 18, 25

THE FLOOD OF STRANGERS POURING INTO OUR LAND IS COMING HERE ONLY TO FIND GRAVES. Then, Babylon will burn, and its merchants wail:

Then, the Saxon nation will at last be left in peace, and under their own vine they can obey God's command and rule God's creation as kings and priests. Then they can worship God the WORD who created them in the beginning as his own special treasure.

"Babylon the great is fallen—the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth are waxed rich through the abundance of her delicacies. —

—after having conquered all his enemies around, he advised with his counsellors to build a city... and Nimrod called the name of the city that he built Shinar— and his kingdom became very great. And all nations and tongues —gathered themselves to him —and they brought him offerings (taxes), and he became their lord and king, and they all dwelt with him in the city of Shinar. and Nimrod reigned in the earth over all the sons of Noah, and they were all under his power and counsel— but Nimrod—. rebelled against the Lord, and taught all his subjects and the people of the earth his wicked ways." How We Were Played – a Brief Recap of The War on Democracy Where Nothing Adds up

Fabian Ubiquitus

Professor Neil Ferguson
UK Corona Adviser

THE CRIMINAL CLIQUE THAT HAS HIJACKED THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT and used its position to wreak havoc upon the nation is fast being found out as lie after lie after lie is exposed.

And as a consequence it is fast running out of friends because these crooks are not people anyone wants to be too close to when the you-know-what hits the fan.

Even amongst traditional conservative groups such as that of The Conservative Woman website the criticism of the most dishonest wrecking crew in British history the exposés of its malfasance are both relentless and scathing as you'll see from the sample article below.

Of course, true conservatives see through the febrile fake conservatism of Johnson and his so-called Gang of Loons, who are about as truly Conservative as Pol Pot. The gang choose after all to be closely advised in matters of mass manipulation and “behavioural change” by such experts as Professor Susan Michie a leading British Communist Party member.

As as for the notorious Ferguson, we said from the beginning that his track record of wildly inaccurate yet scary predictions should make him the last “expert” you'd want to trot out in before an aghast nation. The inaccuracy of his work was, after all, well known before the Gang of Loons made use of him.

His value to their psyop and its attendant coup was clearly not the accuracy of his predictions. It was how scary they were and how “sciency” they looked so as to bamboozle and scare into compliance what was assumed to be a somewhat timid nation.

The following article is a scathing and damning exposé that hammers yet another very large nail into the government's coffin. It was published in May 2020 as the patriots of CTW did their best to warn the nation that serious skullduggery was afoot and it is a crying shame that more people did not see or heed it.

Members of our feckless or bought Parliament, for example, or the MSM, all of whom contributed to war against our nation by choosing to ignore facts that were right there in front of their nose.

We are featuring it here now in the hope that the message will finally sink in.

Millions of us are now looking forward to the trials where the Gang of Loons, their puppet masters, cronies and collaborators and the whole sorry crew of enemies of the nation are brought to trial and answer for their crimes.

The source for the following article is here. We highly recommend TCW as an island of sanity in a sea of maliciously manufactured hysteria. Their critiques of Johnson and his crew of lunatics are always worth a read as you will discover.

The Strange Bedfellows of Professor Panic
By Janice Davis

A Lot of attention has been given to Professor Neil Ferguson's dubious track record on epidemics and his equally dubious judgment in meeting his lover on at least two occasions during the lockdown introduced on his own advice.

On closer examination, there are two especially significant elements crying out for independent investigation: the quality and reliability of Ferguson's computer model, and the political affiliations of his lover.

Jeftovic believes the most worrisome outcome of the model review is that the code produces 'non-deterministic outputs'. This means that owing to bugs, the code can produce very different results given identical inputs, making the code unsuitable for scientific purposes.

Jeftovic says the documentation provided wants the reader to accept that given a 'starting seed', the model will always produce the same results. 'Investigation reveals the truth: the code produces critically different results, even for identical starting seeds and parameters.'

He says that a team even found that the output varied depending on which type of computer it was run on.

Jeftovic cannot understand why the Imperial team failed to realise that their software was so flawed. He quotes the usual computing adage 'Garbage In/Garbage Out' which the untrained reader may think is what is being asserted in the code review.

In fact, he says, 'it's not. What's being asserted is that output is garbage, regardless of the input. In this case, the output we're experiencing as a result is a worldwide lockdown and shutdown of the global economy, and we don't really know if this was necessary or not, because we have no actual data (aside from Sweden) and severely flawed models.'

Another expert, Martin Armstrong (who has a controversial record) also reviews the Ferguson model code and comes to very similar conclusions. He says that it 'is such a joke it is either an outright fraud, or it is the most inept piece of programming I have ever seen in my life—

This is the most unprofessional operation perhaps in computer science. The entire team should be disbanded and an independent team put in place to review the work of Neil Ferguson—

The only reasonable conclusion I can reach is that this has been deliberately used to justify bogus forecasts intent for political activism—

There seems to have been no independent review of Ferguson's work, which is unimaginable!'

Which leads us neatly to the second facet of the affair – the actual 'affair' and the politically radical lover.

Professor Ferguson, 51, is said to be estranged from his wife Kim, with whom he has a 17-year-old son.

He is reported to have used the match-finding website OkCupid a year ago to meet Antonia Staats, 38, currently married and living with her husband and two children. Ms Staats is a Left-wing campaigner who works for the US-based online network Avaaz, an organisation that promotes global activism on, among other things, climate change.

The Guardian has called Avaaz the globe's largest and most powerful online activist network, and it has a world-wide following of around 10 million people. It is loosely connected with Bill Gates, through the World Economic Forum, which also lists Al Gore and Christine Lagarde on its board. Staats works as a senior campaigner on climate change for the group, and is said to be sympathetic towards the aims of Extinction Rebellion. Indirectly, on the surface at least, this ties Ferguson to climate change, a cause that the lockdown has served very well by managing to shut down the world economy.

Ancient Mysteries: St Catherine’s Hill and Mizmaze, Winchester
From Our Bristol Correspondent

St Catherine’s Hill and Mizmaze, just south of Winchester, is a nature reserve offering fine views of the city to those who manage the strenuous climb to the top. It is also steeped in history: here you will find the site of an ancient fort and chapel, and a not-so-ancient turf maze.

Iron Age settlers built a fort on the hill 2,500 years ago. Its circular ramparts ringed the top of the hill, giving ample opportunity to observe the surrounding countryside.

The group of beech trees at the top is known locally as “The Clump”. Beneath them lie the remains of St Catherine’s Chapel, a Norman structure built 900 years ago. The chapel was destroyed in 1537.

There are differing explanations for the naming of the hill, and of the chapel that was built upon it. According to one source, it derived its name from the circular form of the hill fort, St Catherine having been martyred upon a wheel. Alternatively, it is locally thought that she was the patron saint of hilltops (having supposedly ascended to heaven from Mount Sinai), and the name is in use for hills elsewhere in the region.

The Winchester Mizmaze

To the left of The Clump is the Winchester Mizmaze, one of eight historic turf mazes still remaining in England. Cut into the chalk, with no junctions or crossings, this is not a maze in the modern sense but a labyrinth. It is 624m long and formed from nine nested squares, in a pattern similar to that used for the traditional game of Nine Men’s Morris. Unusually for a turf maze, its form is rectangular rather than circular.

The origins of the Mizmaze are obscure. Although mediaeval in design, it is thought to date from the 17th century. Local tradition links it with Winchester College, as boys from the school used the hill as a recreational area. The legend is that it was carved one summer by a boy who had been banished to the hill for bad behaviour. With nothing else to do, he drew on his knowledge of classical maze design and set out on the lonely task of measuring out the maze. The story ends with the boy drowning on the last day of the holidays!

Far fetched though this tale may seem, no other explanation has been found for the creation of the maze. It is equally uncertain what it was intended for. It is thought that some medieval mazes may have been built for penitential rituals but a recreational purpose is more likely by the time of the 17th century. Certainly, walking around the maze (known locally as “tolling of the Labyrinth”) became a regular pastime for the College schoolboys.

The maze fell into disuse for a while, but was recut in the late 19th century. The practice of tolling the Labyrinth was resurrected and has continued to the present day.

AGENDA 21 | NEW WORLD ORDER VACCINE DEPOPULATION

5G Network at 60Ghz Creates Oxygen Intake Problem Which Result In Death By Suffocation Just like COVID

5G Technology utilizes electromagnetic waves that are smaller than 4G technology is being built and installed despite not having been tested by the government or the telecom industry for serious negative health effects.

Joe Imbriano (B.S. Chemistry & Biological Science from University of California) warns that 5G technology will broadcast at 60 GHz, which is the absorption spectrum of oxygen molecules, which means it can kill at a distance. At the molecular level, these frequencies affect the orbit of electrons, and that affects the ability of blood haemoglobin to bind with oxygen. If blood cannot hold oxygen, the result is death by suffocation.

In short, 5G technology has the potential of being used as a weapon to quickly weaken, disable, or destroy individuals or populations. 5G can create the oxygen suffocation effect, extermination of the entire human race and fertility problems because of the radiation.
