FASCIST OPINION.

The National Government Fraud Economy At The Expense of The Poorest

MR. MANDEVILLE ROE, who has studied the Unemployment problem both in this and in other countries, shows that all the "scandals of the dole" are not on one side.

WHEN the National Government, after an electoral victory so sweeping—as to have no parallel in history, was returned to office everybody understood we were in for a period of most drastic economy. For—the nation now had two alternatives only, either to pay up for the crimes, follies, and blunders of the Labour Government, or to behave like a fraudulent trader and go bankrupt.

By supporting the National Government the British people decided to do the honest thing, however unpleasant it might be. The National Government demanded sacrifices from all, and on that basis of equality of sacrifice the whole country was prepared for privations even as great as those demanded in War. The Government, however, has not even attempted to achieve equality of sacrifice.

What is Economy?

Some people seem to think that economy merely means saving money, regardless of how it is saved, or what material losses- are sustained in saving it. That is an utterly false definition, but it is unfortunately the one which the National Government has embraced with eagerness. As I once heard Mr. Pethick, Lawrence point out in the House of Commons, that neither the present administration nor the last wild riot of Socialism (led by the same Right Honourable Gentleman as lulls the present Government) gave a thought to this absolutely first principle of public affairs.

The abolition of the "genuinely seeking work" clause. I have elsewhere denounced that clause, and am prepared to denounce it again, because the need for such a clause indicates the utter failure of the whole system of Labour Exchanges, which should be the clearing houses for jobs and men.

Yet without that clause in a state of affairs such as we have had, Unemployed Insurance Benefit is robbed of all meaning and those who receive it become State pensioner & Need I ask if they are likely to be fit for work, should they ever be lucky enough to get it, after that? The Socialist Party was, as rapidly as it could, producing a nation of- paupers, and it began by pauperising the unemployed!

The National Government is completing the pauperization; indeed, it is so successful that unless the process is in some way checked it will produce an Outlaw Class of society which, if it once organizes itself, can only lead to absolute anarchy and lawlessness.

Every mean, contemptible, and petty expedient is adopted to remove men from Unemployment Benefit, or from the receipt of aid from the Public Assistance Committees. In this unsavoury work public officials who really have no connection with the problems at all.

When asked if there were any men present looking for a job. Several people in the public gallery put up their hands, and an official of- the court took their names and addresses. On-going to the Labour Exchanges these men were suspended from benefit on the ground that they were wasting their time in a police court when they should have been looking for work!

Such efforts as this at economy are utterly mean and contemptible. Not merely are public officials doing all they can to remove men from benefit, but there is also private active support for the official attitude, which appears to be that the figures of unemployment must be- reduced by fair means or foul.

An appeal was made from the plat-form of a cinema one afternoon for any men in the audience seeking jobs, and that incident also had an exactly similar result to that in the case I have just cited.

I can well imagine that some of my fire-side critics will bark, "Serve 'em right!" when they hear- that the unemployed who suffered were enjoying themselves in the police-court or the cinema. All I have to say to those critics is, "If you lost your job or all your money to-morrow, how would you like to look for work in present conditions? Do you think you would succeed? I know you would not; the work is not there!" Those "Dole" Scandals!

At frequent intervals the newspapers regale us with stories of men who, having hundreds, of pounds in the bank, peacefully lived on Unemployment Insurance Benefit, or relief, for years. There are over two million unemployed; it is not surprising to find one or two black sheep in such a very large flock! But to hear the backwoodsmen of the Service Clubs talking you would imagine the entire two million were a gang of abandoned thieves.

Fortunately, we know who the thieves are in our civilization, although we do nothing about it. They are the Guinea-Pigs who live on interest; they toil nor neither do they spin. If they have worked and retired they are entitled to do so. Yet those who, in virtue of being sons of their fathers, inherit comfortable incomes for which they have to do nothing, are people of whose means any Government is entitled to take a very drastic toll, particularly when there are millions unable to keep themselves by the labour of their hands.

Instead of that, our National Government, zealous- for "equality of sacrifice," plunged its greedy hands into the few shillings a week of the day-labourer, the small income from investment of the widow and orphan, the meagre salaries of those teachers who are paid less than dustmen but have to keep up the appearance of being well-to-do or they do not get jobs.- Nothing was safe,- nothing was sacred, from the great Economy Ramp of the National- Government.

I know not if this be a land fit for heroes, but I do know, so far as the ordinary working people and the unemployed are concerned, that it is a land full of heroes.

FOR GOD, KING, AND- EMPIRE

Sir,---In times of national distress we must not let the past deter us from clear thought with regard to the future.

There will be a great effort by the "Socialist Party," under Soviet influence, to cause unrest and foment strife to gain office to complete a destructive policy.

Socialism must be crushed. Yours, etc., Stanley George, F.B.E.E,

A LATE CONVERT

SIR OSWALD MOSLEY has the Courage to Praise Fascism. Many readers will have observed with surprise the long- article contributed- by Sir Oswald Mosley to The Daily Mail in which he tells English people candidly, impartially, and concisely, what Fascism has meant for Italy, and what it has, done to "raise up- the Italian people morally and spiritually," as- Mussolini promised.

Not so long ago Sir Oswald was sitting among the Red-raggers of the Clydeside. He is not ashamed to acknowledge he was wrong. That is an act which requires courage. Sir Oswald has courage. What is more, Sir Oswald is not ashamed to admit that as he gets older, he learns.

By doing that Sir Oswald has definitely lifted himself out of the rut which contains all the normal politicians. It is rare to find a politician capable of learning, and still more rare to find one who will admit that he has not known everything there is to know from the- day he left his cradle—but some of them have never left it, intellectually ! And others have gone back to it.

The leader of the New Party has, in short, become a Fascist in theory, if not in name, whether his courage will extend as far as owning the name with pride remains to be seen. At all events he has shown that the House of Commons is not such a Sodom and Gomorrah as to contain no righteous men.

Loyalty is not everything. Loyalty will not cure unemployment; loyalty will not solve the adverse balance of trade. New political measures are required, and the only new measures likely to produce the desired result are Fascist ones. If Sir Oswald Mosley has really recognized that, then he is on the high road to being of service to his country.

One word of warning to him and his friends. The British public loathes one thing above all others in its statesmen: Insincerity. If any man tries to convert the public to Fascism by calling it something- else that man is doomed to failure. The British people are not fools; great though the prejudice against Fascism may be on the ground that it is "foreign," the public would rather the supporters of that doctrine had the courage to call their proposals by their right name.

Sir Oswald Mosley has shown the courage to face a Hyde Park mob, and we are proud to think he had British Fascists among those who fought to save his Union Jack. We are sure he will also have the courage to tell the British public that it is Fascism, and Fascism alone, which can save the country from collapse.

THE GAMBLE ON THE FUTURE

EVER since the beginning of time the problem which has most interested mankind has been that of unravelling the future. All generations have alike been obsessed with the desire to know their own fate, in matters great and small. From the time of the Israelites—and probably earlier, only history does not relate—prophets endeavoured to satisfy this need, and whether it is as to what follows death or what will win the three-thirty at Ascot, mankind still craves for this knowledge of the future.

This applies- also to politics, and in no field is it more easy for a prophet to be wrong. In each of the War years 1914, 1915, 1916, and 1917, a certain gentleman adorned the head of his leading article in November with the words "Over by Christmas!" and then, of course, in 1918, when the war was over by Christmas he forgot to do it!

There appears, however, to be one feature of British politics since the War which everybody fails either to notice or to interpret, except those people actually concerned with it.

When there is danger of public disorder—strikes, riots, lock-outs, Communism—the ordinary man in the street goes and hunts up the local officer of the British Fascists, not to become a member, but just to say, "Well, in case of trouble, count on me, old chap!"

This happened before the General Strike, before many other lesser disturbances. It is happening again now. What is in the wind this time?

HAMPSTEAD BRITISH FASCISTS

BY the courtesy of Mrs. Francis-Hawkins, who lent the branch a small theatre for the occasion, the Hampstead Branch gave a most amusing variety show in aid of the organization. The programme was arranged by Miss M. Percy-French and Miss. Norah Parkes, and included songs by Miss Evelyn Green and Mr. Lesley Hall, with Mr. W. J. Bussey the comedian to enliven the proceedings.

After the presentation- of several bright little sketches, County Commander N. Francis-Hawkins, who both commands the area and is a General Staff Officer, explained briefly to the audience the purposes of the British-Fascists and the necessity for Fascism to-day.

THE WORKERS' HEAVEN

Those Who Live There Tell the Truth

THE veil of false glory which propagandists have laid over the grim horrors of Sovietism has- at last been torn aside by the people who live there.

Trud, the organ of the Soviet Trade Unions, tells- the following facts about factory life in Russia to-day:—

"The housing conditions of barracks No. 4 are very bad. Married and single men live in that barracks. The room is so cold that the workers have to sleep in their clothes. Some of the windows have no panes. The barracks are dirty and full of parasites. From day to day the, workers do not receive, goods to which they are entitled."

Here is another case from the same paper:-

"The supply of workers with food is appalling. The queues are endless and the workers prefer to do without boots and other manufactured goods rather than stand for hours in front of the shop":

British and Russian Miners, Compare Notes!

The hardships of our own miners, great as they have been, pale into insignificance compared with the working conditions of their Russian "comrades." This is a description of communal dining-room at one Russian mine:—

"Five hundred miners have to share three glasses and nine spoons. The building workers attached to that mine have a dining-room which possesses no roof. Rain and snow fall down in the food, and dirty puddles exist on benches and tables." Russia, in short, is inflicting on her people worse conditions than any- we underwent during the War. Cast your mind back to those days of food-queues and privation, and then remember Sovietism is worse than that. Do you want that here?

THE MAKERS OF MODERN ITALY WHAT NAPOLEON FORESAW

("The Makers of Modern Italy,
Napoleon—Mussolini," by Sir
J. A. R. Marriott; Oxford University Press, 10/-)

SIR John Marriott has done very wisely to bring up to date his earlier study of the Risorgimento, particularly- as the advent of Fascism has meant the completion of that great historic movement and we are now able to regard the development of Italy in the truly historic sense.

Before the Great War there was an air of being unfinished about the Kingdom of Italy which can only be explained by the existence of a so-called democratic constitution in imitation of English and other foreign models.

Sir John, whose delineation of historical characters and their political motives has long been renowned, shows how unsuitable this was to Italy and how Lecky and others who wrote of the Risorgimento before him naturally regarded Italy as falling away from the high ideals of nationalism.

It is to Napoleon,- however, more than, any other one person, that Italy owes her separate existence as a great nation to-day. As Sir John Marriott points out, he was more than half Italian-- himself, and he dreamed of a great Italian Kingdom or Empire to which his stepson, Eugene Beauharnais, should succeed. It does not affect the argument at all that he later partitioned Italy himself and allowed the Papal State to continue in existence ; he had had the idea, and he had shown the Italians that he could execute it if he liked.

Sir John Marriott, in this brilliant book, which every Fascist should read, traces how the seed Napoleon planted in the Italian mind grew and unfolded into a great tree, despite the storms of revolution, civil war, and Austrian repression. This work will enhance the reputation—already great—of our most prominent living historian.

Napoleon could not foresee Mussolini, but he could and he did see Italy strong under a strong man. So it was that he prepared the way for Fascism, a way which was to be thorny with anarchy, republicanism, assassinations, and civil wars, until finally, in 1921, Italy found her own soul in the black legions of Fascisti. Napoleon had been dead exactly a hundred years, and here at last was his successor.

ALIEN GAG ON THE BRITISH PRESS Complete Suppression of Vital Colonial News Hullabaloo about a Book

READERS of The Times of March 6th, 1931, will have- noted a long and interesting despatch from Cape Town, which was followed by a most complete and mysterious silence in that and other papers. An important passage in The Times report stated. "The Jews are told that they are still a small minority in South Africa and have no right to attempt to dictate to the majority."

The South African Immigration Restriction Bill was a memorable event, for it united the white races regardless of the distinction of British and Dutch, or of party divisions. The Jews then stirred up the black population to make demonstrations, but fortunately the local police kept the situation in hand despite the use of stones and knives.

And then—Silence

That was all the British public were allowed to know by their Jewish masters until a paper the Jews cannot gag — The Patriot — informed its readers on the 10th December of the warning given by the South African Minister of the Interior (Dr. Malan) to the Jews, "I want to warn them that if they want to hit us, they may be assured we will hit back."

Yet none of the great British dailies took any further notice of the question. England must not know that the Jews had tried to conquer South. Africa!

Meanwhile events had moved fast in South Africa; the Jewish Board of Deputies met and decided to take action against Dr. Malan, but the nature of that action they did not disclose to the Press (Cape Argus, November 4th, 1931). How domineering the Jew is by nature is seen by what followed. A deputation visited. Dr. Malan and handed him what amounted to an ultimatum. 'They were really rather stupid; they categorically denied facts of which the Government had definite information, and it was generally apparent that they were scared.

The Jews Show their Power

Now comes the strangest thing of all. It looked as if Dr. Malan had the Jews where he wanted them.

A book, which British booksellers will not handle, but which is obtainable at British Fascist Headquarters, "The Riddle of the Jews' Success," was sent to the Minister of the Interior to read.

He, having all the experience of his struggle against the Jews in South Africa, wrote to- the translator, Mr. Capel Pownall, saying how much he appreciated this valuable work.

What hold the Jews had- gained over Dr. Malan nobody except themselves can tell, but certain it is that, almost immediately after the Minister had written his appreciation, they screwed- out of him a denial that he had ever read it!

So here we have another case to put beside that of Henry Ford, where a strong Gentile champion has suddenly by this Asiatic power been forced into a very humiliating surrender.

The Stupid Jew

Now, however, the limitation of the. Jew's mentality becomes apparent. He believes in feeding the Gentile public on anything favourable to himself, as was stated again and again in the Protocols. He also believes, when the occasion offers, in intimidating the Gentiles. In this instance, however, by keeping the whole business out of the English Press he has deprived himself of a rather fine opportunity of showing his own power.

For he cannot tell the story of Dr. Malan's surrender without telling that of his own attempt to conquer South Africa. Poor Ikey! Truly the way of the transgressor is hard.

GENEVA AND THE FAR EAST

No More War—by Lake Lemman! No More Peace—on the Whangpoo River!

PERIODICALLY since the end of the Great War friction has occurred in the Far East between the Chinese and the "foreign devils." That state of affairs, however, prevailed to a lesser extent throughout the preceding century. There is therefore nothing very unusual in the present state of things, when viewed in the light of history.

Yet the Chinese of to-day are not the nation which climbed down to Lord Palmerston, and the- Japanese have really only come into the picture at all since the- turn of the century.

The hatred of the Chinese at the time of the Boxer Rising was all directed against Europeans; now the situation is complicated by the East facing- the East.

What is more, both the yellow races possess a civilization, and a degree of organization, which has never appeared before. They are, in short; capable of doing infinite harm both to themselves and to all the other nations of the world. The Meaning of Concessions.

While the Japanese have no doubt acted under great provocation, some-what similar to that which our own Government has so timidly endured for years in India, the Chinese also have a genuine grievance, and one which the other nations holding Concessions in Shanghai need never have allowed to occur.

It is recognized by Treaty that the foreign settlements in Shanghai are not Chinese soil, but that of the countries whose subjects occupy the Concessions. Those Concessions have therefore their own Government and their own means of carrying it out quite independently of the Chinese authorities, who have no business whatever, and who hold no rule, within the Concessions.

Among these nations holding Concessions are the Japanese. They; in common with everybody else, recognize the neutrality of the Concessions. Yet they launched their attack on the Chinese town of Shanghai from a base- within the International Settlement! This was a high-handed action which could- and which should never- have been undertaken. Quite apart from the question of the territorial rights of the Concessions, it of necessity involves in the Chinese mind an accusation against all the other Powers of having aided the Japanese forces by allowing them to use such a base.

A word from any representative of the Powers at the right time, but particularly a word from the- British Government as the senior, having the longest-standing relations of this sort with China, would have been sufficient to deter the Japanese.

But that word was never given, for the British Governments so far has figured chiefly as a mouthpiece, for the Americans.

The Secret of American Enmity to Japan

As was shown in Henry Ford's book, "The International Jew," which he afterwards withdrew under Hebrew pressure, America is largely in the hands of the Jews even in the sphere of politics. Now there is one civilized country in the world where the Jew is not welcome, and is rightly bundled about his unsavoury business. That is Japan, and, so the American Press has been dragooned into- a slanging campaign against the Japanese which is bound sooner or later to lead to trouble.

At- present Japan could take on the Americans with one hand and give that spirited, but rather witless, people a sharp lesson, but later she will be put in that position by outside powers that she will need money for her expansion, military and otherwise, and then she will find no source of it which does not ultimately stretch back to the purse of a Jew.

Blether, Blether, Blether at Geneva!

Meanwhile, with shells falling into the International Settlement at Shanghai the League of Nations—comfortably out of earshot at Geneva—discusses World Disarmament! Among the proposals made is one for the total abolition of aircraft for warlike purposes. Chapei is still blazing from Japanese incendiary bombs as we write.

Last year the manoeuvres at Spezia conclusively proved the uselessness of land and sea defences against such attacks. Yet the civilians at Geneva will never learn that the only weapons men will throw away are those which are no use. It is a fact which should be obvious. Nobody dreams of proposing a motion to the Conference urging the abolition of the cross-bow. Time has abolished it already!

What, then is the course to take! Are the nations to go on with costly and unproductive expenditure demanded by heavy armaments? Is there no hope of relief? There is, but not by the Geneva way. Not till the backward-nations have all reached a stage of civilization equal to our own will Disarmament be anything but a crime against civilization as a whole.

And that crime rests upon the souls of the old women of Geneva and their myrmidons over here, the League of Nations Union!

BRITISH FASCIST INVESTITURE

THE British Fascists are holding an investiture at the Admiral's Cabin, Strand, W.C.2., on February 8th, at 8 p.m., when several officers and members will be decorated with the Order of the Fasces for their devoted service to the cause of King and Country.

This Order was founded shortly after the end of the General Strike, when it was felt some recognition should be granted for the sterling services rendered at that time. While all did their very best and did it loyally and with a will, outstanding merit was honoured in this way.

There are three classes of the Order, the decoration being wrought in gold, silver, or bronze. At the forthcoming Investiture only one gold order is being awarded. It goes to Col. H. W. Johnston, the O.C. Men's Units.

At the meeting the new British, Fascist Hymn, by A/Commr. Mandeville Roe, will be sung for the first time in public. It is set to the inspiring tune "Giovinezza" (Youth).

IF GUY FAWKES WERE ALIVE NOW

IN a recent speech Commander Oliver Locker-Lampson, R.N., M.P., described the present crisis as the most serious in our history since Guy Fawkes's attempt to blow-up the Houses of Parliament.

"It might," he added, "be much less of a national disaster if Guy Fawkes could make his attempt at the present day, and make it successfully!"

"May we express the hope," replied a British Fascist who was present, "that one member at least would not be in his place in the House at the time of such a sanguinary event?"

Commander Locker-Lampson's repeated and intensive campaigns to awaken national patriotism since the end of the War will be in the memory of all our readers. Those efforts of his throw into glaring relief the lack of any leadership whatever in other Members of Parliament.

"SEA MADNESS" By Douglas Dixon, Lt.- Commander R.N

"No orders for new tonnage were placed by British Trawler Owners in 1931, and their programme for 1932 does not include the building of any trawlers whatsoever." Why? Because cheaply manned -foreign vessels may land their fish on our shores with all the advantages of a Briton, and, because of the free import of fish packed abroad! Britain, whose herrings were once the greatest item of her export bill, after Blake whipped Van Tromp, allows the "import" of fish "The value of the herring catch is down by £600,000 compared with last year.---One-fourth of the boats will not show a profit."

"More and more of our coastwise trade is being carried by foreign tonnage." Again because, cheaply manned, the foreigner is given the complete freedom of our ports and pilotage, without reference to the lack of reciprocity in Continental harbours.

* * * * *

The security and strength of Britain was not built on such policy; that it was built on sound foundations is proved by her continuing in strength in spite of all that Cobdenism implies, up to 1914.

"The British proposal for the abolition of submarines will again be brought forward at the Disarmament Conference in February." Because, say we, "The abolition of this arm will ultimately benefit the nations as a whole" ---and, moreover, we are quite right, ---but Lord Nelson believed in "compelling peace," though he never anticipated success without the "power of compulsion." Can we "compel" the abolition of submarines upon the nations of the world? Hardly, if the "crisis" and "Gold Standard " are real ; and yet we would advise other nations to scrap a weapon which is of no value to ourselves, though it was, and may again be, our greatest menace; while it may remain for the others their surest means of defence in its offensive potentiality against the slender shreds which hold our Empire and the World's security together. To talk of "Humanity" as the reason for abolishing a thing of which one is dread afraid is plain HUMBUG, and we may count upon it that no power will see the gesture otherwise; while they secretly scoff at our stupidity in our free disbursement of maritime privilege, which, and if we forget it others do not, is the true and only basis of "SEA POWER."

* * * * *

Lacking- that strength and security of pre-war days, we can no more afford "humbug" than we can the altruistic gestures of a prosperous era. So long as big business (for which read international flum-jummery) and politicians expect to overcome a crisis by asking merchant seamen to accept reductions on their already ridiculous remunerations, lay the lodging-houses of Invergordon open to all agitators anxious to take advantage of cuts in Naval pay, and by the continuation of a policy of "open harbours" and "what is for my seaman is even more so for yours," so long may we anticipate our lot becoming worse.

* * * * *

The Navigation Acts may have worked ill against our own people, yet such policy employed empirically will prove the sense of self-interest as emphasized by the late Lord Birkenhead. While charity at home, our home, England, may well restore a stricken world to "The Sunshine Of Sanity" sought by our one-time First Lord, Mr. Winston Churchill.

Fishermen and Merchant Seamen formed Britain's first Navy at the call of Alfred. Their progeny: --

Lacking everything they needed; but the heart that pulled them through made the Duke Medina helpless, so the Great Armada went.

Then when U-Boats nearly killed us,
Fishing craft, their gear all rent,
Helped by many a worn-out tramp boat, patched the fabric of our tent.

* * * * *

So when seaways seem so easy; forget we not upon whose knee

Lies the duty of compelling, freedom, for the world, a' sea.

* * * * *

For 1932 good resolutions may we cut out humbug and substitute charity at home. We are wedded to the sea and she is a mistress well worthy of our consideration—else we may live only to endorse, "Hell knows no fury:---"

* * * * *

Far-called our navies melt away,
On dune: and headland sinks the fire.
Lo,- all our pomp of yesterday
Is one with Nineveh and Tyre;
Judge of the nations, hear us yet,
Lest we forget, lest we forget--

THE BRITISH FASCIST HYMN. (Tune: Giovinezza).

Dedicated to Miss R. L. Lintorn-Orman,
Founder of the British Fascists, by E. G.
Mandeville Roe.

Hai! The nation sprung from heroes,
Hail! Britannia's race immortal!
Face the conflict of the morrow
With the courage of your fathers.
Never heed defeat or sorrow,
Leadership like great King Arthur's,
Times of danger and of storm-cloud
Will be found to see us through.

Chorus:

*For the young blood and the strong
blood
Victory need never wait;
From the young blood and the strong
blood
Comes the lead ordained by fate!*

From the whole of England's Empire
Loud the youthful voices- rise,
Calling all to do their duty,
Gird their swords upon their thighs!
'Gainst the enemy among us,
'Gainst the intellectual fungus,
'Gainst the traitor, and the hater
Of the Empire all should love!

Chorus:

*For the young blood and the strong
blood
Victory need never wait;
From the young blood and the
strong blood
Comes the lead ordained by fate!*

March! This rising generation
Forward for the cause of justice,
Plant new hope within the nation,
Raise the flag where all may rally!
As its folds float proudly o'er you,
Fascists! Do the task before you!
Weld- the classes and the masses
In the Empire of our race!

Chorus:

*For the young blood and the strong blood
Victory need never wait;
From the young blood and the
strong blood
Comes the lead ordained by fate!*
